Move to Give District Own Government Wins Support

Members of House, Senate Committees Favor Suggestion Of Senator Holman

Approval of a proposal to introduce a resolution granting District residents a charter commission to choose their own type of government, suggested Monday by Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, yesterday was voiced by members of the Senate and House District Committees.

Chairman McCarran of the Senate group, long an advocate of District suffrage, declared that he was "heartily in favor" of such a measure, which was prompted by last week's investigation of Gallinger Hospital. Holman, who heads the subcommittee handling the probe, attributed unsatisfactory conditions there to the fact that District residents have no voice in city administration.

"Might Be First Step"

In the House, Chairman Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia asserted that Holman's resolution "might be the first step" in securing a vote for the disenfranchised District. "At least we can get concrete evidence of the wishes of the people," he added.

Senator Capper (Republican) of Kansas stated that he felt that the Capital's inability to vote was "one of the crimes of the Nation."

"I've been trying to get suffrage for Washington for years, so naturally I'm heartily in accord with Senator Holman's proposal," he said.

"Something Wrong"

Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota, another member of the subcommittee investigating Gallinger, observed that the situation in the District is certain to be corrected ultimately and that his colleague's suggested legislation might be the opportunity to attain that end.

Senator Buck (Republican) of Delaware agreed that the Gallinger inquiry "tended to show that something was wrong" with fundamental principles of local government.

Also in accord with the Holman suggestion was Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, who announced that he would support such a measure.

WAC Lieutenant Is Found Dead, Apparently Slain

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., Oct. 5 (AP).—The body of a pretty, 25-year-old WAC officer, apparently killed after a struggle, was found tonight near a railroad overpass here.

The dead WAC officer was identified by military authorities at the technical school, Army Air Forces Training Command, as Second Lieut. Naomi Kathleen Cheney, Jasper, Ala. She was a personnel officer at the radio school here.

First Lieut. Luther Evans, assistant public relations officer at the school, said there was evidence of a struggle in the tangle of underbrush at the spot where the body was found. He would not elaborate.

Lieutenant Evans, who described Lieutenant Cheney as "a very attractive brunette," said she was last seen when she left the gate at the Army school about 9 p. m., Monday, after visiting a roommate, another WAC officer, in the hospital at the Army school.

History Repeats

Yanks Win Series Opener, 4-2, On Lanier's Wild Pitch in Sixth

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 5.—After a 16-year-interval, World Series history repeated itself today in favor of the New York Yankees, who were presented with the winning run on a startling wild pitch by Max Lanier of the Cardinals.

Even as they were benefactors of a wild pitch by John Miljus of the Pirates in the decisive play of the 1927 series, the Yankees today capitalized on Lanier's erratic heave to break a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning and win the series opener, 4 to 2.

From second base, Frankie Crosetti carried the winning run home as 68,676 fans, sardined into the big stadium, gasped at the sudden turn of events that lost Lanier his pitching duel with Spud Chandler.

It was the break of the game with Catcher Walker Cooper, Lanier's battery mate, giving aid and comfort to the Yankees in that stabbing moment for the Cardinals. Crosetti was on second, Bill Johnson on first base with one out when it happened.

The next pitch got away from Lanier. It bit into the dirt in front of the plate with Joe Gordon at bat. The ball caromed upward off Cooper's mitt and climbed over his head, lobbing to earth only 30 feet behind the plate. Cooper couldn't find the ball. In a daze he wandered in all directions but the correct one. For some reason

New Measure Rigidly Sifts Deferments

Bailey Presents Administration's Draft Amendment

Vote Expected Today

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Sweeping restrictions on occupational deferment of able-bodied nonfathers in Government and industry, were provided last night in an Administration substitute for the Wheeler no-father-draft bill.

The new Administration measure, drawn with Selective Service assistance and sharply tightening draft loopholes for childless men, was offered in the Senate by Senator Bailey (Democrat) of North Carolina.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley maneuvered the amendment into position for a Senate vote today, and predicted it will pass. A vote will follow on substitution of the so-called Taft amendment, inducting fathers by age groups, opposed by the Army high command.

Would Kill Wheeler Bill

Approval of either substitute will destroy the Wheeler bill, with its flat ban on father inductions and replace this with statutory machinery for steering childless men of military age into the armed service ahead of fathers wherever possible. But neither will halt father inductions.

Bailey's amendment, offered in conjunction with Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri and completely revising the mild early version of the Bailey-Clark amendment, strikes at alleged excessive deferments of physically fit nonfathers from three tangents:

1. Provides that no single or childless male between 18 and 38 who is physically fit shall be employed by the Federal Government unless authorized officials or committees set up to review deferments certify him to be "indispensable"

Chairman Vinson Acts After Reading Expose in Post

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

A thorough investigation into the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., with public hearings starting next week, was scheduled yesterday by the House Naval Affairs Committee.

A resolution authorizing the investigation was unanimously approved by the committee after Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of Georgia had read excerpts from a story about the Johnsville, Pa., plant written by Agnes E. Meyer and published in The Washington Post last Sunday.

Vinson told reporters that "the Navy, labor and management all seem responsible" for "the deplorable production" at the plant.

Article Spurred Inquiry

Representative Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, ranking majority member of the committee, was appointed chairman of the subcommittee to conduct the inquiry. Other members will be Representatives Hebert of Louisiana and Harris of Virginia, Democrats; and Representatives Grant of Indiana and Johnson of California, Republicans.

Representative Hebert said that the investigation was ordered as a result of Mrs. Meyer's article in The Post.

Appointment of the ranking majority member of the Naval Affairs Committee as chairman of the subcommittee indicated that the investigation would rank as one of major importance.

De Lorenzo's Statement

Vinson asserted that the subcommittee would make a thorough investigation into Brewster's "failure to deliver airplanes in anywhere near the quantity it should."

The Brewster firm has plants at Newark, N. J., and Long Island City, N. Y., as well as at Johnsville.

First witnesses will be called from Johnsville, committee members said yesterday. They believed that Tom De Lorenzo, union leader,

Economy Group Collects Data On U. S. Garage Housing 150

By Linton Burkett
Post Staff Writer

The Byrd Economy Committee of the Senate is conducting its own investigation of the deal whereby the Federal Works Administration leased the Capital Garage, at 1312 New York ave. nw., it was revealed yesterday, with the disclosure that the committee has data showing the site was assessed at $1,069,500 and was being rented to the Government for $134,925 annually.

Meanwhile Ernest E. Hall, executive director of the Federal Works Agency, asserted, in a prepared statement, that their figures showed the cost of garaging a car there would be $12 a month when the full capacity, which, he said, is 521 cars, is reached. He also asserted that the project was surveyed and approved by the Bureau of the Budget last spring, and arrived at the conclusion it would result in a substantial saving of money and conservation of gasoline and rubber.

In conclusion Hall said:

"We are renting the building through the Public Buildings Administration on an annual lease subject to renewal until the war is behind us, subject to all the customary governmental safeguards and at an annual cost of $134,925.

"To this should be added $46,630 for the maintenance and operation of the building. That makes $181,555. Of this expense $48,000 is allocated to file and storage space—the equivalent of three floors of the garage building—and $63,555 to rental, maintenance and operation cost of the servicing, repair and office facilities. These last occupy the best space and require decidedly the major part of the heat, light and water, although they will take up only two floors or a little

More Tankers, Too

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The recent opening of the Mediterranean Sea to Allied shipping has made a possible rearrangement of world petroleum supply routes so that the British can contribute a fairer and larger share of petroleum from their supplies in the Middle East, President Roosevelt disclosed yesterday.

Within the limits of shipping, everything is being done to reduce the military demands of the United Nations on our own oil reserves and refining capacity, the President said, pointing out that the need to use the limited supply of tankers on the shortest possible routes has placed a disproportionate burden on American oil reserves.

The President also disclosed that the War Mobilization Committee has long since issued a directive to all interested agencies to increase and use to the fullest extent crude oil production and refining capacity in the Middle East and the Caribbean area.

To Increase Supplies From Iran

Arrangements are now being made to increase the movement of gasoline and distillate fuels from Abadan, Iran, on the Persian Gulf, to points previously supplied from Western Hemisphere sources, Mr. Roosevelt said. Substantial shipments of crude oil are being brought to our East Coast from the Caribbean in order to utilize fully our refining capacity, he said.

The impression is getting abroad that the British have been refraining from supplying oil from their controlled resources in order to preserve their reserves for future use, but the facts do not support this impression, President Roosevelt said.

The British have been anxious to increase the delivery of oil from their controlled resources for the bunkering of vessels, for civilian consumption, and for phases of the war program, the President said. Tanker tonnage has been up until recently the restricting factor in providing the theaters of war and civilian populations with an adequate supply of petroleum products, he said.

Cites Figures on Distances

Mr. Roosevelt went on to compare the distances between Iran and major fighting fronts and those from the United States to points of greatest consumption.

From Abadan, Iran, to Noumea, New Caledonia, is 9800 miles, compared with 5700 miles from California to Noumea, he said, and from United States gulf and Caribbean ports to tthe United Kingdom the haul is 4600 miles compared with 11,000 miles from Abadan around the Cape of Good Hope to the United Kingdom.

Had the British been permitted to increase the supply from Abadan, a wastage of our very meager supply of tankers would have resulted and the extent of our mili-

5th and 8th Armies Push On; Anglo-U. S. Naval Units Raid German Shipping Off Norway

American Fliers Score Hits; Nazi Destroyers Flee Under Shelling

By Howard Berry
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Oct. 5.—A strong Anglo-American naval formation, paced by planes from a United States aircraft carrier, was disclosed tonight to have staged an audacious attack on German shipping along the heavily guarded coast of northern Norway.

Planes from the American carrier were credited with scoring bomb hits on several Nazi vesels, including an 8000-ton tanker.

This action, which cost three American carrier-borne planes downed as against two Nazi aircraft destroyed, coincided with a clash off northwestern France early Monday between light British naval units and a squadron of German destroyers.

The Admiralty announced that the British war vessels scored shell hits on "several" of the Nazi destroyers and set two of them afire as the enemy squadron turned about and fled. All of the British ships were declared to have returned safety to harbor with "very few casualties."

Nazis Claim British Destroyer

A broadcast German communique claimed a British destroyer was torpedoed, and shell hits were scored on other destroyers.

The North Sea sweep marked the first time American warships had engaged in offensive operations there.

The daring foray Monday into Nazi-held Norwegian territorial waters was aimed at the area off Bodoe on the upper arm of the deep Salten Fjord, 110 miles southwest of the Norwegian Arctic port of Navrik.

In effect, the formation sailed to within reach of some of the most powerful nests of Germany's "battle fleet in being" and challenged that fleet to come out and fight.

The German warships, however, cowered in their fjord hideouts where, at last accounts, the Nazi superdreadnaught Tirpitz, the battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, the heavy cruisers Prinz Eugen and Hipper and other enemy warships were reported lurking.

Major Offensive Possible

Although several American warships, as well as the aircraft carrier, participated in the action, the operation was conducted under the aegis of the British Home Fleet. It was the first time in this war that the Home Fleet had gone on the offensive. Previously it had concentrated on defending the British Isles and their sealanes against attack or threat of attack.

The Bodoe area, target of the naval and air raid, was particularly well suited for the foray since it is a midway station for German shipping that hugs the Norwegian coast as it moves with supplies and reinforcements to the Nazi fronts in northern Finland and Russia.

The action foreshadowed a possible major naval offensive designed to cut off Germany's north-

By Graham Hovey

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Oct. 5.—The Allied Northwest American Air Force was disclosed today to have broadened its campaign with deadly attacks on two of the most important German airdromes in Greece.

These raids, executed yesterday by American Liberator heavyweights and Mitchell medium bombers, coincided with shattering Flying Fortress assaults that cut the main railroad reinforcement artery from Germany to Italy via the Brenner Pass.

For the third time in the Mediterranean offensive, the four-engined B-17 bombers struck and wrecked bridges across the Isarco River at Bolzano, 30 miles south of Brenner, and pulverized rail marshaling yards at the north Italian inland city.

Other Fortress formations simultaneously negotiated a round-trip expedition of some 900 miles to blast the bottleneck coastal rail junction of Pisa, 170 miles northwest of Rome.

Nazi War Plants Blasted for Fourth Consecutive Night

London, Oct. 5.—Strong forces of RAF bombers punched at least six German industrial cities last night in a fourth successive night of furious aerial onslaught, and left the big city of Frankfurt torn and shaken by its second raid in 12 hours, and its heaviest of the war.

Frankfurt and Ludwigshaven were the only cities mentioned in the official British report of the night's operation, which also spoke of the Rhineland in general, but the sorely beset Nazis in the details. A communique filled in. They acknowledged heavy destruction to Frankfurt, and said Mannheim (Ludwigshaven's twin city), Worms, Offenbach and Saarlautern were also raided by "terror" bombers.

More than 500 tons of high explosives were unloaded on Frankfurt, motor, chemical and rubber city of half a million persons, which, in the daylight preceding the RAF attack, was subjected to a precision bombing by American Fortresses, which aimed at the city's important plane works.

Yugoslavs Take Italian Isle of Lussino

Naval Units' Action Threatens Pola Navy Base, 50 Miles Away

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 5.—Yugoslav naval units—joining in the campaign of the People's Liberation Army to wrest the Dalmatian coast from the Nazis—have captured the island of Lussino, strategically located 50 miles southeast of the Italian naval base at Pola, a communique broadcast today by the Free Yugoslav radio announced.

The broadcast, reported here by Reuters, said the Partisan naval units participated in a two-day fight to capture the Italian island and took 258 German offcers and men prisoners. (Reuters first reported the island to be Lofinj, but later corrected it to Losinj, which is the same as Lussino.) The London Yugoslav government, which is not connected with the Liberation Army, was unable to verify the capture of the island.

Lussino, one of a string of islands lying along the Yugoslav coast, poses a direct threat to Pola, the Italian northeast Adriatic base 90 miles due south of Trieste.

Capture of the town of Prijepolje on the River Lim in Montenegro also was reported in the communique.

As these Yugoslav Patriot advances were made against the Axis, the rivalry between Gen. Draja Mihailovic and the Montenegran leader, Josip Broz, popularly known as "Tito," was highlighted with a charge issued here by the latter's supporters that General Mihailovic was collaborating with the Ger-

Russians Thrust To 30 Miles From Vitebsk Bastion

London, (Wednesday), Oct. 6.—Keeping its initiative in White Russia alive despite mud and the Germans, the Red Army yesterday overran 46 populated places in the Vitebsk sector, and pushed to within 30 miles of that Nazi stronghold, which is 110 miles from the Latvian frontier, the Moscow radio announced early today.

In the midnight communique, recorded here by the Soviet monitor, the Russians mentioned only guerilla activities south of Gomel.

Berlin nervously indicated that the Russians were moving troops at both ends of the front—around Lake Ilmen, far to the north, and at the southern end of the line just north of the Sea of Azov.

Kolishki Captured

In the Vitebsk advance, Kolishki, 30 miles east of the city, was among the points captured. Speaking of this action, the communique said: "The Germans launched several counterattacks, but were thrown back."

The war bulletin listed more than 1150 Germans killed in two engagements near Vitebsk and Gomel.

There was a fresh hint in the communique's announcement that four enemy troop-laden barges had been sunk by aircraft of the Soviet Black Sea fleet that the Germans were pulling out of their slim foothold on the Taman Peninsula, or even withdrawing some forces from

Two Airfields Taken

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 5.—The Allied Fifth and the British Eighth armies pushed ahead toward the battle of Rome today against a sharply resisting German force officially estimated tonight to contain from four to five divisions.

(Such a force presumably would number from 60,000 to 75,000.)

On the Italian west coast the Americans, supported by British armor, were methodically wiping out Nazi pockets of resistance left to impede their progress a short distance north of Naples.

On the Adriatic coast Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's army, aided by new landings from the sea at Termoli, was going ahead more rapidly in the direction of Pescara, where the main lateral road from Rome joins with the coastal road.

Flanking Move Extended

In the central sector the Americans drove into Montesarchio in the mountains southwest of Benevento in extension of a flanking movement designed to threaten any stand the Germans may attempt to make on the banks of the Volturno River, 20 miles north of Naples.

The advance north of Naples, while not great in distance covered, has nevertheless resulted in the occupation of two of the most important airfields in southern Italy, Pomigliano d'Arco and Capodichino, it was announced today.

The former is 8 miles northeast of Naples and adjacent to it is the Alfa Romey Aircraft & Engine Works, which is a self-contained town where 12,000 persons lived and worked until last May. Capodichino is 3 miles outside Naples. Both fields have been used by the Germans, especially for troop-carrying transport planes.

Montgomery Nears Pescara

Gen. Henri Giraud tonight formally announced the liberation of Corsica, which gives the Allies a new potential air base closer to vital targets in eastern Germany than any yet taken in Italy, and within fighter range of southern France and the Genoa and Leghorn regions.

On the Adriatic coast, Montgomery's vanguard was reported only 40 miles from the important coastal

Aussies Advance In New Guinea, Ousting Japanese

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, (Tuesday), Oct. 6 (INS).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur today announced a fresh ground advance by Australian jungle troops battling north of newly captured Finschhafen in New Guinea's Ramu Valley.

The Aussies drove the Japanese from positions near Kaigulin, and occupied the village.

American positions on Vella Lavella Island in the central Solomons, the communique also announced, were "ineffectively" bombed at night by the Jap air force. An American patrol intercepted 50 Zeros and in the ensuing sky battle 6 zeros were shot down for the loss of 1 American plane, the pilot of which was saved.

Aerial coastal patrols destroyed four Jap barges during the day, and Navy surface units bagged two more off the north coast of Kolombangara.

But 'A Long Way Off'

Victory Certain, President Says In Opening Drive for War Fund

President Roosevelt held that "victory is certain," but warned "that it is still a long way off, and that for it we are paying and shall have to pay a great price," in his radio address last night opening the National War Fund Drive for 125 million dollars of which the District quota is $4,800,000.

The President said, "I ask you to remember that the USO is your share of what we are doing for our own fighting men, and the forces behind the lines. I ask you to consider that War Prisoners Aid does what no Government can do. I ask you to think of United Seamen's Service in terms of the people's debt to the men who took our ships across in the darkest hours of the war."

The President's text in support of the drive follows:

"We, the people of the United States, know now that ultimate victory is certain—but that it is still a long way off, and that for it we are paying and shall have to pay a great price.

"In the genius of the American people—for freedom, and decency, and friendliness among neighbors—lies one of our best weapons for that victory, and certainly our greatest insurance for a peace that will be just and lasting. Our men and our Allies know they have made no covenant with our Government alone. They know they have the backing of all the resources and spirit of the American people themselves. In that conviction alone lies the winning morale which no slave of a dictator can ever know.

"That is why I am glad to speak to you tonight about the National War Fund. It is a philanthropic federation with three simple aims; first, to determine the nature and the extent of the war-related needs; second, to see that everybody has a chance to contribute to the funds required; and third, to channel the sums raised for its member agencies wherever American help is currently most needed—enough and on time.

"The National War Fund has the hearty approval and support of all the Government agencies concerned with our management of the war. For the National War Fund, by its unity, its economy, its competent management, and its elimination of waste, duplication and delay, is playing a part in our total war effort which all of us in Washington regard as an absolute essential.

"In its unity of purpose, and its federation of agencies without surrender of State and local freedom of method, the National War Fund combines the American genius for organization, the American capacity for economies, and the best or our American tradition for giving freely, promptly, and in proportion to our means and the

Flier's Beheading Proves Japs Uncivilized, Roosevelt Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt said yesterday, in commenting on the beheading of an Allied airman in New Guinea, that the Japanese are not a civilized people, and that this and other barbaric acts proved it.

A reporter asked Mr. Roosevelt what he thought of a code which permitted the Japanese to commit such an atrocity.

The President said that you could draw your own conclusion. This, he continued, was not the first instance of barbaric conduct by the Japanese; there had been many other instances, all combining to show a lack of civilization.

The one thing that got under the Japanese skin, the President said, was to be accused of not being civilized. But, he added, he didn't care much if he did hurt their feelings.

Discussing the Allied offensive in the Southwest Pacific, Mr. Roosevelt thought people ought to pay more attention to one thing which amounted to a real Naval defeat for the Japanese as they retreat from their positions in the central Solomons. This was the heavy destruction of Japanese barges.

Not a day goes by, Mr. Roosevelt said, that we don't sink a number of these barges. The news, he continued, may not sound impressive, but these barges mean a good deal to the Japanese, since they provide the only means of transportation in that area.

In the last 30 days, the President went on, our forces have sunk a very large number of these barges. The net result, he said, is proof of Japanese weakness in that whole theater of war. Their last-minute evacuations, he said, are in line

Ingenuity, Courage

4 Trapped 60 Hours on Ship Saved

By Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Oct. 5.—Four American soldiers are alive today due to ingenuity and courage when trapped for 60 hours in a warship compartment surrounded by water after a bomb blew a huge gash in the ship's side.

They were R. J. Garmuchsky of Canton, Ohio; Joseph Costa, Fall River, Mass.; James H. Lowes, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Charles J. Clark, jr., Covington, Ohio.

The water poured into the compartments all around them, even above their heads, and water dripped through the cracks in their safety door.

One telephone line was working from their cell to the bridge.

After many hours of effort, the men on the bridge managed to pump air down to the trapped men.

The official account said that Lowes, who is only 19, tried to read and sleep, while Clark and Costa queried the bridge as to when they were going to get out. Costa, the only married man, worried about his wife, who is expecting a baby.

The crippled ship, which had put her wounded on a hospital craft, lurched slowly toward a port.

Capt. Robert Cary radiod the plan of the cell to the port and asked that a coffer dam be constructed so that the men could be gotten out as soon as the ship arrived.

"The dripping water sort of got on our nerves," Clark said. "We rolled up our dungarees and rags and stuffed them against the leaks. It still came through, but we could not hear it splashing."

On the deck the men worked at scheme after scheme to get food and water to the trapped men.

First they tried dropping ice cubes down the ventilator, but they failed to reach the men.

"We could hear the cubes dropping, but they didn't come out," Garmuchsky said. "Then they tried to pass down a wire. Then a rubber hose. But nothing worked. That's when I stumbled on the brightest idea."

Because the air was being pumped in a strong current, the air was going out toward the deck up the vent. Garmuchesky took some toilet paper, tied a piece of thread to it, and threw it into the vent. It sailed up to the deck and into the deck officer's face. The thread then was used to pull a large wire through the ventilator and finally a rubber hose through water was sent down. Oranges and apples followed.

After 60 hours the ship reached port and the British rushed the cofferdam, which already had been built, on board, while they tried to get the warship into drydock.

Working in the cofferdam in a flooded marine compartment the men started drilling holes into the radio compartment.

"It was pretty nerve-wracking watching those holes come through," said Lowes, who had spoken least of any in nearly three days of imprisonment. "And then the chipping got on our nerves."

Recommendations have been made that all four be cited.

King, Halsey, Nimitz Have Honolulu Talk

By the Associated Press

Honolulu, Oct. 4 (Delayed).—A Pacific war strategy conference has been held at Pacific Fleet headquarters here among the three top-ranking Navy commanders, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, announced tonight.

Attending besides Admiral Nimitz were Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, and Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of the South Pacific force of the fleet. It was the first visit Admiral King had made to the Pacific action theater since outbreak of the war.

Date Is Not Disclosed

The terse announcement disclosed that Admirals King and Halsey had returned to their headquarters "after conferences at Pearl Harbor" with Admiral Nimitz. The date of the conference was not disclosed, but presumably King has returned to Washington and Halsey to the South Pacific.

Their meeting here recalls that Halsey made a trip to Australia to confer with Gen. Douglas MacArthur a short time before Halsey's command started the New Georgia campaign June 30.

On the same date, MacArthur's forces occupied the Trobriand and Woodlark Islands and made a landing at Nassau Bay in New Guinea which was climaxed ultimately with the capture of Salamua, Lae and Finschhafen.

Enemy Outpost Targets

The admirals conference points to the enemy's extended perimeter of Pacific island out posts as possible objectives.

In choosing where to strike, the men drafting our Pacific strategy could aim at any point in the vast war theater from the Kuriles just northeast of Japan proper, to Bougainville Island in the northern Solomons, the enemy's last stronghold there.

Two recent carrier task force raids hitting the Marcus Island and Gilbert Island area prove that the fleet's strength has been increased to a point where the Navy's Pacific ships and men are now ready for a fight, and are looking for it.

the Crimea.

On Monday, the communique said, Russian troops on all fronts destroyed or disabled 53 German tanks, while 48 enemy planes were brought down in air combat or by antiaircraft fire.

The Moscow radio said that Soviet planes Monday night raided Rogachev, 61 miles northwest of Gomel, and blasted two points, Vasilevka and Melitopol, on a rail line leading from the Crimea.

Moscow dispatches said that strong German counterattacks were increasing over wide sectors, but it was not clear whether this Nazi action and current rains had caused the Soviet drive to stop, or whether it had been ended first by Soviet design, with the German counterattacks coming as a result.

Nazi Counterattacks

Both Berlin and Moscow discussed the halt of the Soviet offensive. The leading editorial in the Moscow army newspaper Red Star took cognizance of the German counterattacks today, saying that a repulse of them "is one of the most necessary undertakings for furthering our successful offensive."

city of Pescara, which is at the eastern end of a main lateral road running south westward across Italy to Rome. There were indications the Germans were throwing reinforcements into Montgomery's path.

The line marking territory now in Allied hands runs from a point a little north of Naples to Montesarchio, thence to a point 10 miles east of Benevento, and from there almost due north to the Adriatic coast.

Reported 85 Miles from Rome

(Radio France in Algiers reported that an Allied spearhead was within 85 miles of Rome at one point and that the Germans were falling back steadily toward the capital. This was not borne out by any official announcement.)

In both coastal areas the Germans left pockets of resistance in orchards and other places affording natural shelter, and these were being wiped out one by one. The Nazis continued to make as many demolitions as possible.

As American patrols fanned out north and east of Naples without finding indication that the enemy intends to make a serious stand short of the Volturno River, the work of reconstruction in the great port itself progressed rapidly.

Water and some food had been transported by truck to alleviate the hardships of the population. The people were clearing debris from the streets and assisting in the removal of German-laid mines.

Capital on Way To Be Safest City, Van Duzer States

Washington will be the safest city of over 500,000 population by the en dof the year, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer predicted yesterday in reporting a total of 648 traffic accidents here during September, as compared to 801 in the same month last year.

Traffic fatalities dropped from 9 in September, 1942, to 7 last month, and injuries decreased from 334 to 259. Of this number 128 were pedestrians, as compared to 155 a year ago.

Van Duzer renewed an appeal for continued caution by all pedestrians and motorists.

with their mass retreat from Kiska, and the whole operation shows that the Japanese legend of invincibility is a hollow one.

Discussing the campaign in Italy, President Roosevelt said that the Fifth Army and the Eighth Army are consolidating their positions and are making good progress in their drive northward.

He repeated a remark that he made at his last press-radio conference on Friday—that nobody on the Allied side can know for sure where the Germans are going to make their main stand.

The President, in response to a question, said that the Fifth Army is made up of both American and British divisions under Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark.

ern fronts from their sources of supply. Since Sweden recently terminated German traffic across Swedish territory to Finland, the Nazis have been relying exclusively on shipping along the Norwegian coast to maintain their supply lines to northern Norway.

As the naval task force was returning from the attack, two enemy planes "endeavored to shadow the fleet," according to the official bulletin. Both of the Nazi aircraft were destroyed by fighters which took off from the American carrier and there was "no other opposition," a communique said.

RAF, Fortresses Blast Frankfurt

the Rhine from Mannheim, and site of the I. G. Farbenindustrie chemical plant—the world's largest—stretching for three miles along the river. As terminus of Rhine navigation, the twin cities constitute the largest inland port in Europe.

Frankfurt is located on the Main River, only a few miles northeast of its confluence with the Rhine, while Ludwigshaven is about 50 miles due south. Offenbach lies 5 miles east of Frankfurt, and Worms is another Rhine port about 20 miles north of Ludwigshaven.

Saarlautern is locate close to Saarbrucken, capital of the Saar mining and steel region, and has been bombed before, simultaneously with raids on Saarbrucken.

Twelve British planes were lost from all of last night's operations, which included Mosquito attacks on objectives in northwest Germany. Together with losses for raids on the three previous nights, the average loss for the RAF stands at only 12 per cent.

It was the sixtieth raid on Ludwigshaven and the thirty-eighth on Frankfurt. Both cities are between 400 and 500 miles by bomber flight from Britain, and by assigning them as targets for the night, the RAF again sought to confuse the Germans as to where the big blow would land.

Keeping up their around-the-clock assault, Allied fighters and fighter bombers also struck Nazi targets in France and the Low Countries by daylight. They were credited with destroying four German fighters, shooting up several locomotives, barges and an oil refinery near Ghent, Belgium, and smashing grounded enemy planes. Six Allied planes were missing from these operations.

The RAF's tactics of hitting more than one place at the same time apparently is baffling the Germans as to where the main blows will be struck, thus dispersing defenses and reducing raiding losses.

U. S. Fliers From Africa Blast Nazi Airports in Greece

covered a distance of some 1000 miles to hammer the large Menidi airfield just north of Athens. They joined heavy bombers of the Middle East Command in a nutcracker assault on that field, where "widespread damage" was declared inflicted.

(The Nazi agency DNB in a late broadcast indicated American bombers struck at Greece again on Tuesday when, it claimed, seven U. S. raiders were shot down in combat over Greek territory.)

At the same time, the B-25 Mitchell mediums, escorted by long-range P-38 Lightning fighters, dropped 1000 fragmentation bombs on the Argos airfield in the Greek Peloponnesus, 40 miles northeast of Sparta. Several grounded planes were destroyed.

These were the first attacks ever hurled against Greece by the Allied Northwest Africa Air Force. The Mitchells and Lighnings flew from newly-captured bases on the Italian mainland to spring the first raid against the Balkans from Italy.

Nazis Surprised in Greece

The raids over Greece evidently were calculated to lend immediate support to the British troops on the Dodecanese Island of Cos, battling airborne and seaborne German forces which are striving to recover the island.

Out of many hundreds of Allied planes from Northwest Africa and the Middle East, only one failed to return. That one belonged to the Northwest African Air Force. Five enemy planes were downed in the day's combats, not counting dozens of others smashed on the ground.

At Menidi Air Base where the Liberators hit a number of administrative buildings, hangars and parked German planes were set afire, no enemy planes were encountered, no enemy fighters, indicating the Germans were caught by surprise.

Other airfields near the German-held Greek capital of Athens also were hit in supplementary raids.

The Fortress attack on the Bolzano bridges was the most destructive yet hurled against the vital Brenner arteries. Returning crewmen said they had definitely knocked the steel structure of a rail bridge across the Isarco River out of commission. Numerous direct hits choked the Bolzano railyards with debris.

Mitchell formations, meantime, served the tracks at the rail junction of Isernia farther down the Italian Peninsula, 45 miles above Naples. The Mitchells also blasted an overpass at Mignano as well as bridges and a canal near Terracina in a campaign to hinder reformation of German troops recoiling from the Naples area.

Allied fighters and fighter bombers provided steady support to the British landing parties at Termoli on the Italian Adriatic coast against heavy German counterthrusts.

Tears for Dead

News Dug From Dirt, Shell Bursts

By John Steinbeck

Mediterranean Theater.—You can't see much of a battle. Those paintings reproduced in history books which show long lines of advancing troops, close massed, and being received by massed defending troops, are either idealized or else times and battles have changed. This account in the morning papers of the battle of yesterday was not seen by the correspondent, but was put together from reports.

What the correspondent really saw was dust and the nasty burst of shells, low bushes and slit trenches. He lay on his stomach, if he had any sense, and watched ants crawling among the little sticks on the sand dune, and his nose was so close to the ants that their progress was interfered with by it.

Then he saw an advance. Not straight lines of men marching into cannon fire, but little groups scuttling like crabs from bits of cover to other cover, while the high chatter of machine guns sounded, and the deep proom of shellfire.

Correspondent Hits Ground

Perhaps the correspondent scuttled with them and hit the ground again. His report will be of battle plan and tactics, of taken ground or lost terrain, of attack and counterattack. But these are some of the things he probably really saw:

He might have seen the splash of dirt and dust that is a shell burst, and a small Italian girl in the street with her stomach blown out, and he might have seen an American soldier standing over a twitching body crying. He probably saw many dead mules, lying on their sides, reduced to pulp. He saw the wreckage of houses, with torn beds hanging like sheds out of the spilled hole in a plaster wall. There were red carts and the stalled vehicles of refugees who did not get away.

The stretcher-bearers come back from the lines, walking in off step, so that the burden will not be jounced too much, and the blood dripping from the canvas, brother and enemy in the stretchers, so long as they are hurt.

Sees Building Blown Up

He would have smelled the sharp cordite in the air and the hot reek of blood if the going has been rough. The burning odor of dust will be in his nose and the stench of men and animals killed yesterday and the day before. Then a whole building is blown up and an earthy, sour smell come from its walls. He will smell his own sweat and the accumulated sweat of an army. When his throat is dry he will drink the warm water from his canteen, which tastes of disinfectant.

While the correspondent is writing for you of advances and retreats, his skin will be raw from the woolen clothes he has not taken off for three days, and his feet will be hot and dirty and swollen from not having taken off his shoes for days. He will itch from last night's mosquito bites and from today's sand fly bites. Perhaps he will have a little sand fly fever, so that his head pulses and a red rim comes into his vision. His head may ache from the heat and his eyes burn with the dust. The knee that was sprained when he leaped ashore will grow stiff and painful, but it is no wound and cannot be treated.

"The Fifth Army advanced 2 kilometers," he will write, while the lines of trucks churn the road to deep dust and truck drivers hunch over their wheels. And off to the right the burial squads are scooping slits in the sandy earth. Their charges lie huddled on the ground and before they are laid in the sand, the second of the two dog tags is detached so that you know that that man with that Army serial number is dead and out of it.

These are the things he sees while he writes of tactics and strategy and names generals and in print decorates heroes. He takes a heavily waxed box from his pocket. That is his dinner. Inside there are two little packets of hard cake which have the flavor of dog biscuits. There is a tin can of cheese and a roll of vitamin-charged candy, an envelope of lemon powder to make the canteen water taste less bad and a tiny package of four cigarettes.

The correspondent will get the communique and will write your morning dispatch on the creaking, dust-filled portable, "General Clark's Fifth Army advanced 2 kilometers against heavy artillery fire yesterday."

'First Step Towards Europe' Taken, He Tells French Troops

By International News Service

French Headquarters in North Africa, Oct. 5.—Complete liberation of Corsica from the German grip was proclaimed tonight by Gen. Henri Honore Giraud who told the victorious French forces on the island that "You have taken the first step towards Europe."

Final deliverance of the 3367-square-mile island, famed as Napoleon's birthplace, was announced 20 days after French troops landed on Corsica to reinforce Corsican patriots.

A special communique told of Corsica's redemption, and General Giraud, expressing his thanks to the liberating French forces, foreshadowed a drive into France proper. He declared that the "success of today assures the victory of tomorrow."

Allied losses in the Corsican fighting, in which some American Rangers participated, were described as "extraordinarily light" in contrast to heavy losses inflicted on the Germans. The communique said that "considerable booty" had been captured on the island which lies only 106 miles from the French mainland coast at Nice and 98 miles south of Italy's principal port of Genoa.

(Several hours before Gen. Giraud's announcement was issued, the German high command in its midday communique announced that "all" German troops, together with their equipment, had been safely transferred to Italy.

(Berlin radio broadcasts, following a familiar Nazi propaganda pattern, termed the evacuation of Corsica" a masterpiece of strategic organization.")

General Giraud, commander in chief of the French armed forces, issued a special order of the day in which he congratulated the French patriot and regular troops that expelled the Germans from Corsica.

Shortly after Italy's unconditional surrender was announced, Italian troops joined with Corsican underground patriots in uprisings against the Nazis.

Both Sardinia and Corsica, which lie athwart the main sea approaches to southern France and northwest Italy, now are securely in Allied hands. Mountainous Corsica does not contain any major airdromes, but has landing strips from which fighters can operate. Sardinia, however, has several good fields.

Nazis Claim Coo Island Victory, But Allies Battle On

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 5.—The Germans announced today, that their forces occupying the Island of Coo in the Dodecanese had broken the backbone of Allied resistance there, but the Allied high command said that fighting was continuing.

The northwest African and Middle East air forces, meanwhile, joined together to plaster Nazi air bases in Greece to aid the beleaguered Allied garrison on the island by attacking German air power supporting the Nazi land operations which began on the island October 3. Advices from Cairo said the Germans had landed several thousand soldiers on the island.

The Germans, for their part, claimed that only mopping-up operations "to clear the island from the last, dispersed enemy troops are going on."

They claimed the capture of the 600-man British garrison in addition to 2500 troops of Marshal Pietro Badoglio who had delivered the island into Allied hands September 22.

The Nazis added they had taken 40 guns, 22 aircraft and one vessel.

Saying only that fighting on the little island, 23 miles long and 6 miles wide, off the coast of Turkey, continued, the Allied Middle East communique gave no indication of the trend of the battle.

RAF Beaufighters, it added, on offensive patrol in the area, attacked enemy trucks and personnel on the island with cannon fire.

A delayed dispatch from Istanbul said hard fighting was still going on throughout the island.

General Klopper escaped from Sulmona, 75 miles east of Rome.

MANY THINGS MAKE GREAT NORTHERN Great

"ROUTE OF THE EMPIRE BUILDER"

MEANS "DEPENDABILITY" TO SHIPPERS AND PASSENGERS

Great Northern Operating "Know How" is Big Factor in Maintaining Victory Pace

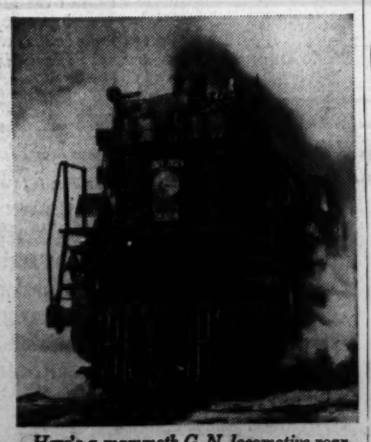
Dependable transportation by rail never has been so important as now, when armament, iron ore and steel, explosives, lumber, plywood, copper, aluminum, magnesium, and an impressive list of foodstuffs are moving from and to Great Northern territory.

Equally important is Great Northern's movement of men and supplies bound for all the theaters of World War II.

This year Great Northern will handle the greatest traffic load in its history with fewer locomotives and cars than during World War I. Its superbly-engineered route between the Great Lakes and the Pacific makes this possible.

Great Northern's short, strategic line crosses the Rocky Mountains in Montana through Marias Pass, lowest in any northern state, and the Cascades in Washington through 8-mile Cascade Tunnel, longest in the Western Hemisphere.

These advantages assure greater comfort for passengers and dependability of freight schedules.



Here's a mammoth G. N. locomotive roaring down the Victory trail with a trainload of war supplies. Regular passenger and freight trains, in addition to special military trains, are handled by different motive power, each designed for a specific job—diesel, electric, coal-burning and oil-burning steam locomotives.

and report the deferment, along with the reasons for it, to Congress.

2. Triple checks occupational deferments in industry by requiring approval not only by the local board where the worker is registered, but review of the action by the Selective Service Appeal Board having jurisdiction over the area in which the registrant works. In addition, the Selective Service director is given final power to decide.

3. Writes into law existing Selective Service instructions that to the fullest extent administratively practicable, fathers living with their families, who have a child or children under 18, "will be inducted after the induction of other registrants not deferred."

Goes Beyond Taft Bill

The amendment goes beyond the Taft substitute in tightening Government deferments, parallels the Taft measure's restrictions on industrial deferments, but fails to induct fathers by age categories or to put priority in selection of married men on a Nation-wide basis.

Senator Clark moved to bring it even closer in line with the Taft substitute by offering an amendment providing for presidential appointment of a board of five doctors, including one each from the Army and Navy, to study physical standards now set by the armed forces with a view to lowering these for limited military service.

Senator Bailey presented his amendment in a speech calling on the Senate to abandon "gesticulations of weakness"—to tell their constituents: "We resolved everything in terms of the necessities of the power and the men and the sacrifices needed to bring our country through this war to victory."

"If it takes fathers to do the job, we will not flinch," Bailey told the Senate. "We will call for them and go back and account to our constituents. If we put sorrow in the homes, then we must put sorrow in the homes. War has been made upon us, and the national security and the national life are still at stake. We are safer than we were, thank God; but we are not yet out of the war, and the fortunes of war are the most uncertain fortunes in all the experience of men."

Senator Taft in an exchange with Bailey told the Senate he was satisfied with the Bailey requirement of "indispensability" as sole grounds for Government occupational deferments, but felt inductions should be on a national rather than a State quota basis, and younger fathers should be called up first.

mans.

A group calling itself "the Association of Yugoslav Journalists in London" issued a statement asserting that all the present fighting against the Nazis in Yugoslavia is being waged by the People's Liberation Army under Tito.

The group charged that "General Mihailovic's detachments still collaborate with the Germans and (Croat) Ustachis."

Asserting that there was no connection between the Tito and Mihailovic armies, the journalists asserted that Mihailovic, King Peter's war minister, deserves no credit for any victories thus far attained.

Mihailovic Accused

The statement gave point to stories that Tito, in radio broadcasts, has accused Mihailovic of playing both sides in the war. It followed a statement by a Zurich correspondent of a Stockholm, Sweden, newspaper that Mihailovic had stated that troops under his command would not be led into battle until the Allies landed in Yugoslavia.

In their statement the Yugoslav journalists said the People's Liberation movement had an army with 5000 officers and a central "Vece," or anti-Fascist council headed by Dr. Ivan Ribar, former speaker of the Yugoslax Parliament. They asserted that the "Vece" represents equally the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes of all classes and religious groups.

The army has 11 generals and it is asserted that British and American officers have been assigned to do liaison work with it.

Recently the German radio claimed that a mysterious "Maj. William Jones" was doing a Lawrence of Arabia feat in Yugoslavia.

tary and naval operations would have been seriously restricted, he said.

When, however, the Mediterranean began to open up to our ships and it appeared that the tanker tonnage would increase in relation to the demand, the War Shipping Administration, the British Ministry of Transport, the Petroleum Administration for War and other government agencies began to arrange for a reallocation of tanker tonnage so as to alleviate the disproportionate drain on the reserve of the United States in the Western Hemisphere and at the same time effect a redistribution of the supply of oil between American and British-controlled sources that will require of the British a fairer and larger share, the President said.

So you see, the scare proved not to be a scare after all, he commented.

who was quoted at length in Mrs. Meyer's article, would be among the early witnesses.

De Lorenzo's statement, quoted by Mrs. Meyer, that "our policy is not to win the war at any cost. The policy of our local union is to win the war without sacrificing too many of the rights which we have at the present time," was among the excerpts heard by the committee yesterday.

Robert Kline, investigator for the Naval Affairs Committee, it was said yesterday, already has been at the Johnsville plant in connection with the investigation.

Representative Homan (Republican) of Michigan told the House Monday that he had called attention to conditions at the Brewster plants in a letter to Chairman Vinson last February.

Senator Wheeler Acts

Yesterday Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana inserted Mrs. Meyer's account of conditions at Johnsville in the Congressional Record.

"Everyone recognizes that Mrs. Meyer is a very brilliant woman and a very keen observer," Wheeler told the Senate.

He pointed out that Mrs. Meyer actually had gone through the Johnsville plant and contended that if she had gone through some of the shipbuilding plants on the Pacific Coast she would have found the same conditions.

Wheeler charged the Administration in Washington is responsible for the creation of inefficient and wasteful conditions.

3 QUICK AND DIRTY
by Paul Gallico

"SOME FOLKS used to think the Germans had a patent on bein' efficient . . . and gettin' things done quick. Well, sir—here's the story of how Colonel Boatner and a bunch of our mechanics licked a problem that had stumped Mr. Goering and his whole doggone Luftwaffe. Seems plain horse sense, coupled with lightnin' fingers, has saved more American lives than we're losing in air war all over the world today. Mighty exciting story . . . and I was right proud of our own American know-how, when I read it."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SUPREME COURT Justice Bill Douglas, whose sense of humor always is a great cheerer-up to the President, is telling this story on himself.

When the American Medical Association case was before the Supreme Court, Dr. Morris Fishbein pointed out to the AMA attorneys that oral argument in the case would begin on Friday and continue on Monday. Therefore, he suggested that if their argument didn't get across with the learned Justices on Friday, they should switch to a new line on Monday.

"That's fine," replied the attorneys, "but how are we going to find out how the justices like our argument?"

"That's simple," replied Fishbein, "just see what they say to each other about it."

"And how will we listen in on their conversation?" asked the intrigued, but puzzled, lawyers.

"That again is simple," replied Fishbein, according to Justice Douglas' version of the story. "We will hire lipreaders to watch them."

The lawyers confessed that the idea, though novel, was worth trying. So they employed two lip-readers, brought them into court early and made sure that they had front seats. One lip-reader was detailed to watch one side of the bench, the other kept his eyes glued on the other side

The session on Friday was long and a bit dreary. Except for Justice Felix Frankfurter, who habitually fires a long series of questions at the attorneys, the justices kept solemn silent faces. Felix, as usual, kept up a barrage of cross-examination.

Finally, Justice Douglas leaned over and made a remark to Justice Stanley Reed.

After it was all over, the Medical Association attorneys gathered round the two lip-readers. As Justice Douglas tells the story, the lip-readers were quite discouraging. "There is very little to report," they said.

"But what did Justice Douglas say to Justice Reed?" asked the lawyers.

"We're afraid it won't be much help to you," replied one lip-reader, "but anyway here it is: Justice Douglas leaned over to Justice Reed and said: 'When is Felix going to keep his — trap shut!'"

Army Advises Housewives

The Quartermaster Corps feeds so many thousands of mothers' sons that it now dares to tell those mothers how to prepare a roast of beef. Here is the advice:

Experiments in Army camps show that if you cook a roast at relatively low temperatures, you will have 20 percent more roast at the end. Cooking at high temperatures shrinks the meat, and dries up the juices.

According to QMC, the desirable range of temperature is 315 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Cooking an eight pound roast at this temperature will require 4 hours and 10 minutes.

In other words, it takes more time than at a higher temperature, (at 400 degrees, it takes only 3 hours), but you save the juices, save vitamins, and will have more roast to slice.

Britain Vs. Russia

ONE THING which distressed the Flying Senators on their round-the-world inspection was the intense rivalry between the British and Russians in the Near East.

The Senators reported that around the Gulf of Persia, where the Russians take delivery on U. S. lend-lease airplanes, the British local commander at first refused to let the Russians set up a local lend-lease receiving agency. The Gulf of Persia long has been coveted by land-locked Russia as a means of reaching the sea. British opposition presumably was based on this.

Finally the British government in London ruled that the Russians could send an airplane mission to the Gulf of Persia, but even then, the local British commander, according to the Senators, delayed and tried to block to plan.

Now, however, the Russians are established at the head of the gulf and work in close cooperation with U. S. officials. To save manpower, the U. S. Army uses skirted natives to assemble airplanes under the supervision of sergeants and doughboys. Then the planes are turned over to the Russians for inspection. In test flights, the Russians cruise all over the Gulf of Persia area, obviously have ample opportunity to map out the terrain.

The Russian base is commanded by a live-wire young general who gets along well with the Americans but is eyed with some suspicion by the British.

The Senators also reported that when the British were a bit starchy about letting the Russians use the airport at Teheran, capital of Iran, further north, the Russian army sent in a regiment one night and, without further argument, took over the airport. Since then the British have had to ask the Russians for permission to use it.

These are a few of the delicate problems facing the Allies in this suspicious, balance-of-power section of the Near East, where, according to the Senators, the chief topic of conversation is the political tug-of-war between Russia and Britain.

Cox Retreats

INSIDE fact regarding the resignation of Congressman Cox from the FCC Investigation Committee was that Speaker Sam Rayburn had worked out a deal with the Justice Department regarding this last spring, but Cox refused to play ball.

The deal was that Cox would resign as chairman of the committee, and simultaneously the Justice Department would drop its case against him. Cox, however, was too tough even for persuasive Sam Rayburn. He would not step down.

Finally, with the prestige of Congress seriously at stake, and with a constant barrage of criticism being hurled at every member of Congress, Cox yielded. He is reported to have been promised that the Justice Department case would be dropped.

However, public criticism has now gone so far that the Justice Department continues to be very much on the hot spot. So the original deal may not stick. Public opinion may be too strong for the Justice Department and even the persuasive charm of Speaker Sam Rayburn.

NOTE: According to Congressman Will Rogers, jr., the Cox military communique should be: "Disengaging activities. Retiring to positions previously prepared."

Women Warworkers Warned

Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—Woman warworkers today were urged to put away eyebrow tweezers and lash curlers for the duration.

Milton M. Bowman of Washington, D. C., field representative for the National Committee for the Conservation of Manpower in War Industries, reported to the National Safety Congress, "woman workers who pluck their eyebrows and tamper with their lashes deliberately reduce nature's safety defenses for their eyes.

"Eyebrows and lashes sift out and ward off a surprising amount of dust and foreign particles that otherwise get into eyes."

Congress Opens Pincer Attack on Tax Plan

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Congressional economy and sales tax advocates yesterday launched a quick pincer attack at the Administration's 10.5-billion-dollar revenue program.

Representative Taber (Republican) of New York said Government economies could produce a net saving of more than four billion dollars in the next fiscal year.

Taber is ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee. He favors a 10 per cent general retail sales tax. He is among the most active members of the Capitol's Joint Economy Committee headed by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, also a sales tax backer.

Sales Tax Advanced Again

In advance of Taber's economy program, the Ways and Means Committee heard M. L. Seidman, chairman of the taxation committee of the New York Board of Trade, call for a 10 per cent tax on all sales to the consumer, without exemptions. He estimated it would yield six billion dollars a year.

Taber was asked whether the economy and sales tax programs were drafted so as to match the Treasury's 10.5 billion dollar extra revenue figure. He said, however, the economy program had been drafted without reference to any particular kind of tax, and he added it was difficult to tell how much a sales tax would raise.

Opposition to Levy

Opposition to a sales levy was presented to the Ways and Means Committee by Morley Wolfe, the spokesman for the National Lawyers Guild, one of half a dozen organizations, including the CIO and Railroad Trainmen, sponsoring a program calling for higher corporation taxes, a $25,000 ceiling on personal income, and increased personal exemptions.

The Treasury program went without a spokesman in yesterday's hearing. Economic Stabilization Director Vinson postponed his appearance until 2 p. m. today.

In the committee, Representative Robertson (Democrat) of Virginia, indicated considerable sympathy for the sales tax plan during questioning of Seidman.

"Don't you think," asked Robertson, "that most opposition to a sales tax comes from a fear that the Government, once it learns how easy it is, will want to continue that form of taxation?"

"That is possible," Seidman replied.

"Then Congress should limit a sales tax to the duration of the war?"

"Yes," said Seidman, "that is very important."

Capitol leaders generally regard the chances of a sales tax getting into law as close to zero without Administration support, and the Treasury is continuing its opposition to such a levy.

Pruning Seen Possible

Taber, in a prepared statement, said the Administration program would cause "consternation" to taxpayers.

He said that the 10.5-billion-dollar proposal could be pared 40 per cent "if the President would practice a reasonable degree of economy in Government spending."

"The time has come," he added, "for Congress to stop, look and listen if we are to avoid national bankruptcy and economic chaos. The President, being without practical business experience, may not realize the seriousness of a situation that is all too apparent to the rest of us."

Taber listed as potential savings in the next fiscal year three billion dollars from the Navy and three billion in Army expenditures and two billion dollars from the War Shipping Board revolving fund.

8½ Billion Slice Proposed

Miscellaneous cuts in other agencies would save a net $658,000,000, he estimated, or an overall gross economy total of $8,658,000,000. He estimated this would be offset by about four billion in increased Army costs, largely payroll and supplies, leaving a net potential saving of $4,658,000,000.

He told reporters he would favor a rehearing by the Appropriations Committee of some of the money bills already written into law for the current fiscal year.

Woman Gets Life In Poison Death Of Her Husband

Waynesburg, Pa., Oct. 5 (AP).—A jury of five women and seven men today found Nancy Jeannette Holt, 29-year-old blonde Oklahoman, guilty of first degree murder in the poison death of her husband, Jesse Holt, 33, former "big inch" pipeline worker.

The jury recommended life imprisonment.

The comely widow appeared calm and unshaken as she stood to hear Chief Defense Counsel J. I. Hook immediately made a motion for a new trial.

Holt died May 27, and it was after his body had been removed to Ravia, Okla., for burial that an investigation was begun which included an autopsy by Oklahoma authorities. Traces of poison were found in his body at the autopsy.

Nelson, Landis in Cairo

Cairo, Oct. 5 (AP).—Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the United States War Production Board arrived today from England, where he inspected war plants. Nelson planned only a short visit here. James M. Landis, newly designated United States director of economic operations in the Middle East, also reached Cairo.

A TEST OF SKILL:

Not a day passes but our skill as operators of a large transit system is tested. New problems . . . old ones revived. Shortages of manpower, gasoline, rubber tires, parts, equipment. Rising costs all along the line. Setting up reserves to care for post-war contingencies. Making a fair profit on invested capital. Ways and means to accommodate 1,500,000 passengers every day so they can reach their homes and offices in reasonable time.

But these problems are the same problems faced by individuals, small businesses, other big businesses every day . . . different in size and scope but basically the same.

However, those characteristics called individualism and ingenuity . . . which Americans have in common . . . combined with the talent so typical of American Management to see things through . . . have raised our country to be the world's greatest producer of goods.

Those same characteristics enable us to face the Future with confidence, in the knowledge that the problems of management today will provide us with the "know how" to give better service . . . more efficient service . . . to the public of Washington . . . in peace time.

Julia says—
Coffee can be entertaining

IT'S ONE THING to brew a pot of coffee and it's another to use coffee as the principal theme in feeding and entertaining a group of people.

I'm thinking of such problems as: taking care of a group of Red Cross workers, or the war-working woman who wants to entertain some friends of a Sunday morning, or an informal midday meeting of P. T. A. members.

Recently I took another trip down into the heart of that hospitable state, Texas. And I had the warm pleasure of being a guest at just such a "party." The hours were from eleven in the morning till half-past twelve.

When I investigated the details later (my curiosity is never satisfied) I discovered that the whole thing had been contrived simply and in a short time. The menu was as follows:

Baked Chicken Hash with Ripe Olive Sauce
Broiled Tomato Halves
Hot Corn Muffins Currant Jelly
Coffee Cake and Coffee

The coffee cake tasted so good with the coffee, I asked my hostess for the recipe. Here it is:

1½ cups enriched flour	1 egg
½ tsp. soda	¾ cup milk
1½ tsps. baking powder	4 tbsps. melted shortening
½ tsp. cinnamon	½ cup seedless raisins
½ cup sugar

Sift flour, measure; sift again with soda, baking powder, cinnamon and sugar. Beat eggs well; add milk, shortening and raisins; then flour mixture and mix until thoroughly combined. Pour into well-greased square baking pan (8x8x2) and let stand in warm place 10 minutes. Sprinkle with topping made by combining 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons sugar, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon butter. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 25 minutes or until done. Serve hot. Serves 6 to 8.

Labor Losses After End of War Forecast

Organized labor will lose about one-third of its present record membership shortly after the end of the war and be face-to-face with a fight to prevent wage cuts, Daniel J. Tobin, president of the AFL Teamsters Union, predicted yesterday.

Writing in the International Teamster, the union's monthly publication, Tobin sharply attacked the CIO and indicated he believed organized labor stood to lose much of its benefits, including protective labor legislation, because of the lack of a united labor movement. He called the action of the International Association of Machinists withdrawing from the AFL "unjustified" and suggested the IAM would help labor's' postwa: position by rejoining the federation.

He suggested the action would "help to build up" the federation "and to strengthen it against the days of adversity that are coming for the masses of organized labor."

"We have no hesitancy in saying," Tobin declared, "that those who created the CIO did more to destroy labor than any men who were ever engaged in the labor movement. Most of the present adverse legislation against labor can be charged to the division of labor, first started by the founders of the CIO.

"Substantially Disagree"

"The leaders of the labor movement are not taken seriously on Capitol Hill by Congressmen or Senators. While it is true that the AFL and CIO representatives agree on certain labor legislation, it is also true they substantially disagree on many important matters."

The present administration, not the organizing tactics of the CIO, is responsible for the expansion of the labor movement, Tobin said.

He said the Wagner Act was "a lifeline" until "we got to wrangling amongst ourselves over jurisdiction," and that the wage-hour law "helped to organize many places in the South."

"The CIO and its industrial unionism could never have done what they have done in organizing, were it not for favorable labor legislation," Tobin said.

Many 'War' Groups

"Now all this labor legislation is liable to be repealed just because of the split within labor. The CIO, as I see the picture, has no intention whatsoever of joining hands with the six million paid-up members of the American Federation of Labor."

The Teamster head, who is one of President Roosevelt's closest friends in the labor movement, commented that many CIO unions are "war organizations" which may fold up when war production stops.

Abolition of OWI Is Recommended By Rep. Gavin

Representative Gavin (Republican) of Pennsylvania, recommended to Congress that it abolish the Office of War Information "and turn over to an American unstrangled press, where it rightfully belongs, the handling of the news."

Speaking in the House on observance of newspaper week, Gavin declared that Americans "are given the fullest measure of control of their existence through the public newspapers."

"During this 'newspaper week' the Congress should resolve to take the shackles off the American press and that Americans shall be told what they want to know, and that is the 'truth' of what's happening.

"Over the years the 'American press' has given a magnificent performance and it deserves our heartfelt thanks rather than the shabby treatment now being dished to it by the 'brilliant intellectuals' of the OWI."

Rayon Production For Synthetic Tires Will Be Increased

Reduction of at least 3 per cent in rayon supplies for civilian use will follow additional conversion of plant facilities to high tenacity rayon cord for synthetic rubber tires, the War Production Board said yesterday.

Four factories were ordered by WPB to increase their total production of tire-grade rayons by 41 million pounds to meet 1944-45 requirements. The order brings the total commitment for rayon tire cord to 235 million pounds of which an estimated 144 million pounds will be produced in 1944.

In addition, roughly 275 million pounds of cotton tire cords will be produced during 1944. Rayon is used in military and heavy duty tires, while cotton cords have been found suitable for passenger car synthetic tires, WPB reported.

The 3 per cent slash in civilian rayon will reduce by 12 million pounds the 400 million pounds originally scheduled for 1944 civilian production, WPB estimated.

Chanting of Cossack Chorus Performed With Original Zest

By Ray C. B. Brown

C. C. Cappel presents the General Platov Don Cossack Chorus (Nikolai Kostrukov, director) on Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program of liturgical chants by Bortnyanski, Lomakin, Donizetti, Chaikovski, Chesnokov and Sakovich; secular songs by Davidovski, Knipper, Bogoslavski, Shostakovich, Musorgski and Blanter; and folk songs.

A large and cordial audience greeted the General Platov Don Cossack Chorus last evening in Constitution Hall, applauding with such warmth as to suggest a reception to the singing representatives of our Russian ally. This group of male choristers intones with a stimulating vigor that would arouse the most apathetic listener, and the best thing about their performance is the apparent spontaneity of the singing, and the absence of any routined or perfunctory attitude. Everything is done with zest as though the program were being given for the first time.

BROWN

The program followed what seems to be an established procedure with all traveling Cossack choral groups by starting with liturgical chants of the Russian Orthodox Church. Appropriately the first hymn, "We Praise Thee, O Lord," was presented in the version by Dmitri Bortnyanski, the first great Russian composer of religious music. This was followed by Lomakin's "Song of the Cherubim." Other selections were Chaikovski's "O Holy God," Pavel Chesnokov's "Save Thy People" and Sakovich's "The Sea." The only non-Slavic number was an "Ave Maria" by Donizetti.

With a change of costume to scarlet blouses as an indication of a secular mood, the chorus plunged into the genial section of the concert with four patriotic songs: "The Bandoura" by Davidovski, Lyov Knipper's "Cavalry of the Steppe," Boguslavski's "Beloved City," composed by a young aviator who took part in the defense of Stalingrad, and Shostakovich's "Victory March of the United Nations." In this group were a Cossack war song, a Caucasian dancing song and an effective arrangement of Musorsgki's "Blakha."

Blanter's "Katusha," a contemporary folk song, opened the last part of the program, which included the gypsy song, "Two Guitars," the old patriotic "Borodine" with its reference to Napoleon's defeat in 1812, a "Laughing Polka" and a lively finale of singing and dancing in the "Kazachok."

Danish Policemen Flee Their Country To Escape Gestapo

Stockholm, Oct. 5 (AP).—Large numbers of Danish policemen are fleeing to Sweden along with thousands of Jews to escape arrest by the Germans.

Danish reports said today the Gestapo and SS forces have begun a roundup of the policemen, many of whom had refused to aid the Nazis in their hunt for saboteurs.

The numbers of refugees, which included 3000 Jews, mounted steadily today as boatloads of Danes reached Sweden.

19 Dutch Executed

Stockholm, Oct. 5 (AP).—Nineteen Dutch students have been executed in Holland, the Berlin correspondent of the Social Demokraten reported today. He said they were put to death under a martial law decree on charges of slaying a German officer and several prominent Nazis in Holland in recent months.

Southern Hungary Rebellious

Stockholm, Oct. 5 (AP).—Martial law is in effect in several districts of southern Hungary, Budapest reports to the Swedish press said today. A dispatch to Svenska Bagbladet said many troop trains were sent to southern Hungary after outbreaks of sabotage and partisan fighting.

50 Pan Americans See Plaster Cast Of 'La Venta Head'

The plaster cast of a room-size stone head unearthed by a National Geographic-Smithsonian Institution expedition in southern Mexico more than a year ago was shown last night for the first time here, to 50 members of the Pan American Institute of Geography and History, representing 13 Latin American countries.

The original head, according to Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic, is called the "La Venta Head." It is one of the largest of five found by the expedition led by Dr. Matthew W. Stirling, chief of the Bureau of American Ethnology, Smithsonian Institution. The discovery was made near the village of La Venta, 20 miles from the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, in Tabasco State.

Dr. Stirling estimated the head to be 1300 years old but its origin is a mystery, he said. Weighing more than 20 tons, it stands 8 feet high. It was sculptured from Basalt, a stone not found within 100 miles of the village where it was discovered.

The exhibit was viewed at the headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

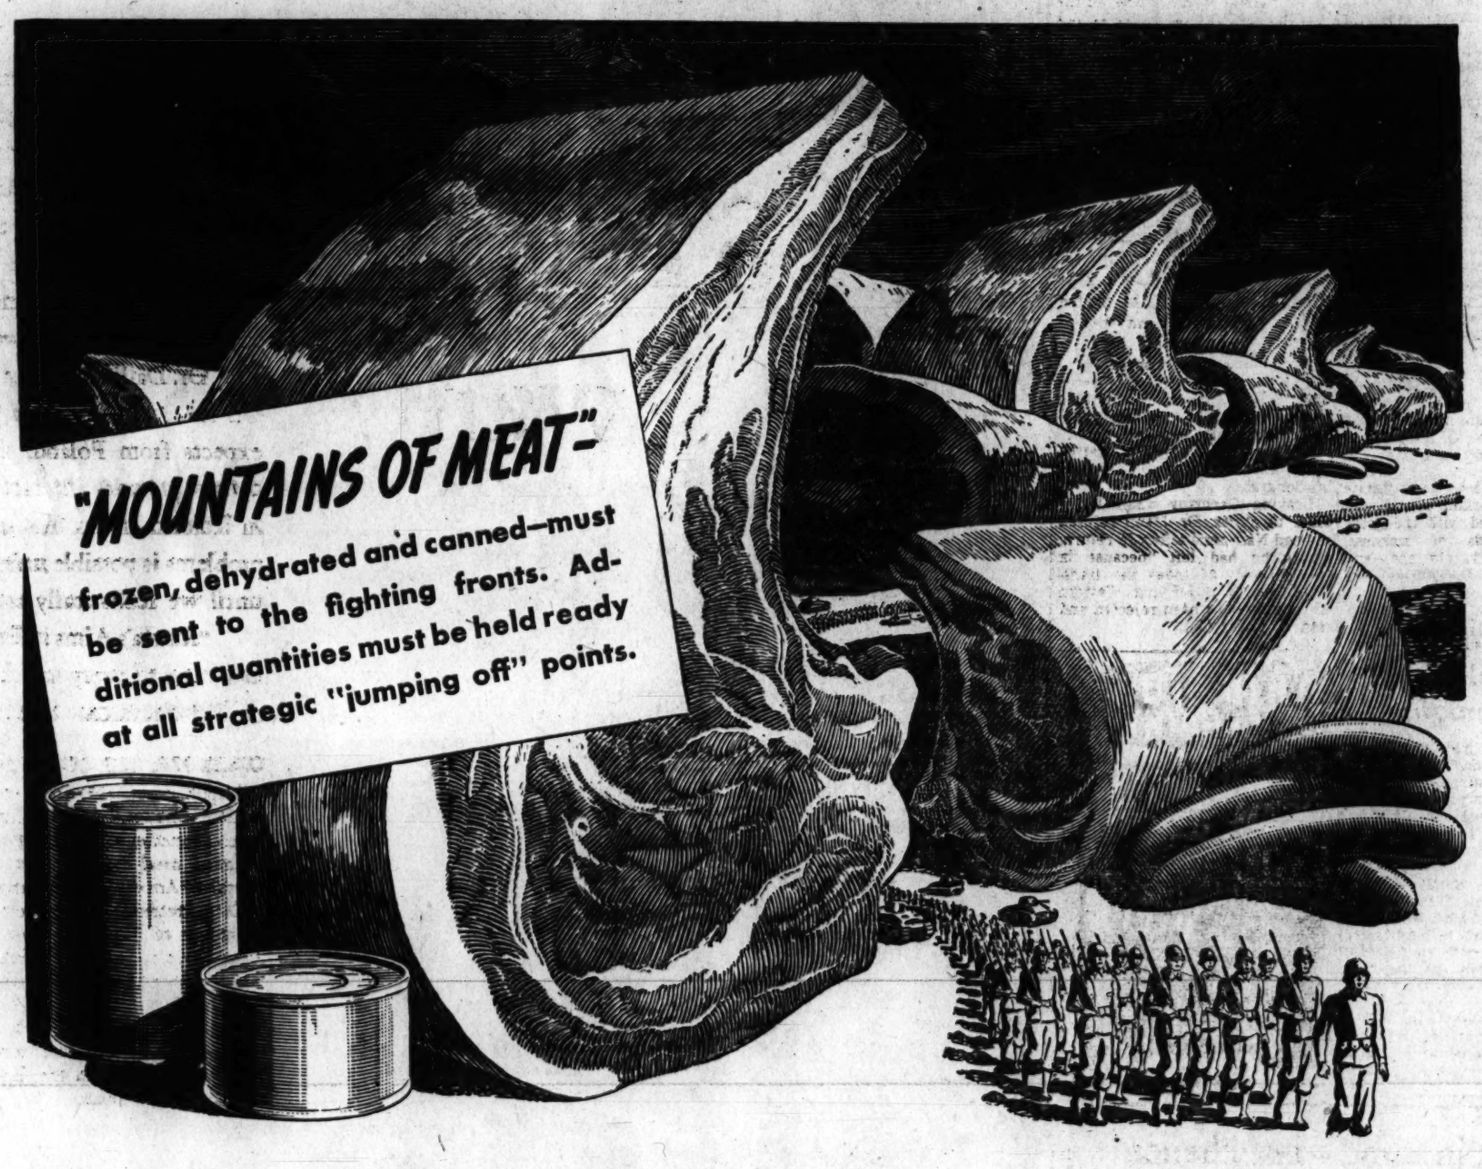
MEAT



"MOUNTAINS OF MEAT"—
frozen, dehydrated and canned—must be sent to the fighting fronts. Additional quantities must be held ready at all strategic "jumping off" points.

When you feel that you are not getting the kind or amount of meat you want, remember —it's for a boy who may smell powder a lot more than he smells meat cooking —and who hears bombs a lot oftener than he hears the sizzle of a steak.

The high-quality, complete proteins, the B vitamins and the minerals of meat are essential to the good physical condition of our fighting forces.

A 90-day advance supply of food is needed for every man in training. An eight-month reserve is needed for every man overseas. Every ship sunk, every shift in the progress of the war can increase the need.

Such are the calls coming in for the sides of beef and pork which used to be available at your neighborhood meat store.

The meat and livestock industries have taken on a job of helping feed our fighters, providing meat for our fighting allies through Lend-Lease, and trying to meet the demands of a harder working civilian population with plenty of money to spend.

More than 1200 American meat packing houses and nearly 1000 sausage makers are bending into this gigantic task. Millions of patriotic livestock producers are working with them in "backing the attack."

PROTEINS ARE ESSENTIAL TO LIFE

All meat—beef, pork, lamb, veal, and sausage—contains complete, highest quality proteins.

All meat contains essential B vitamins (thiamine, riboflavin, niacin) and important minerals (iron, copper, phosphorus).

The human body does not store these nutritional essentials to any appreciable extent; you must get them from the daily food you eat.

Remember, the flavor of meat is not rationed. Even a little meat changes the character of the whole meal.

Supplement the proteins of meat with meat's "allies in protein"—poultry, fish, milk, eggs and cheese. Keep up on proteins.

FOOD FIGHTS for Freedom

YOUR GOVERNMENT ASKS YOU TO HELP— HERE'S HOW:

Produce Food—Let's not permit a square foot of good earth to go idle if it can produce something to eat. Start planning next year's Victory Garden now.

Conserve Food—20 to 30 per cent of America's food has been wasted every year. This waste in itself is more than enough to feed our armed forces. Eat every crumb, drink every drop, and, when it's time, can all you can.

Share Food—Through rationing, civilians are asked to guarantee that our fighters will have plenty. Rationing is Uncle Sam's way of saying, "Home folks, hold back—we need it for the boys."

Play Square with Food—Pledge yourself to accept no rationed foods without giving up ration stamps . . . and to pay no more than top legal prices. That way you can kill the Black Market in meat, butter and other rationed foods.

Roosevelt Promises AFL Price Rollback

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

Boston, Oct. 5.—President Roosevelt sent a message to the American Federation of Labor convention today praising labor's contributions to victory, urged still greater efforts to increase production levels and held out the prospect of a substantial rollback of prices.

The President expressed "gratification at the splendid task that has been done by American wage-earners in turning out the munitions and implements of war."

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, addressing the convention, also praised labor unions generally but said she wanted to "make this perfectly plain. When men are fighting and suffering and dying that we may have peace and well-being, and when there exists, as at present, fair and proper machinery for settlement of disputes, no strike is justified."

Stresses "Voluntary" Labor

AFL President William Green called the delegates' attention to Mr. Roosevelt's remark that "in this free country we are proving ourselves able to do voluntarily all that is necessary for the war effort and to stand back of the brave men who go into combat.

Green asked the delegates to "please note that he emphasized the fact that, in his opinion, labor would do voluntarily—I repeat, voluntarily—all that is necessary through the soldiers of production in order to promote the war effort."

The implication of Green's remark was the AFL's continued opposition to compulsory labor controls at this time.

Delegates applauded as the President's message, read by Secretary George Meany, concluded with the statement that "we anticipate a good deal of success in the roll-back of prices which will stabilize and reduce the cost of living in essentials. For this the informed cooperation of all your members is needed."

Social Insurance Plan Outlined

Green commented that "labor knows that prices have been soaring out of all proportion to the standard rates of wages. We are happy indeed in that the President has assured us that it is his firm and determined purpose to see to it that these high prices are rolled back. We will stand with him."

Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, outlined to the convention a proposed unified comprehensive social insurance system. "It would be tragic," he said, "if we did not recognize that even though we achieve the goal of full employment and full production it will still be necessary to provide a system to eliminate want, because working people will still be confronted with the great economic hazards of sickness, physical disability, old age, and death as well as intermittent unemployment."

Dr. Thomas Mann To Lecture in Congress Library

Dr. Thomas Mann, winner of the 1929 Nobel Prize in literature and famous exile from Nazi Germany, will deliver his second lecture as fellow of the Library of Congress in Germanic literature on Wednesday, October 13, at 8:15 p.m., in the Coolidge Auditorium of the library.

He will speak on "The War and the Future."

Tickets may be obtained on and after Friday morning at the Cappel box office in Ballard's, 1340 G st. nw. Persons will be limited to two tickets each, and will be asked to pay a service charge of 25 cents on each admission.

Dr. Mann has said his theme "will revolve around the burning present problems, treating them from a spiritual, cultural and humanistic point of view," according to Archibald MacLeish, librarian of Congress.

Leaving Germany when Hitler came to power, Dr. Mann refused to heed Nazi persuasions to return, saying he had left "because in the Germany of today the traditional values underlying Western civilization have been rejected and trodden under foot."

Chairman of WLB Warns Striking New York Milkmen to Return to Jobs

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 5.—Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor Board tonight ordered milkmen who left 400,000 families in the metropolitan area without milk deliveries today to return to their jobs by 9 a. m. tomorrow or jeopardize their right to severance pay and other benefits.

Davis wired the International Teamsters Union (AFL) and its New York local from Washington that "continuance of the strike by members of your union at the Sheffield and Borden plants is seriously endangering the health of the people of metropolitan New York."

"This strike," the telegram said, "is in flagrant violation of labor's no-strike pledge."

Drivers and some other employes of the Sheffield Farms Co. and the Borden Co. had reported "sick."

The ailment was diagnosed by spokesmen for the two companies as dissatisfaction by members of a milk drivers' local of the Brotherhood of Teamsters with a recent WLB decision permitting a reduction in routemen and a continuation of skip-a-day deliveries.

Starting yesterday, when 260 drivers for Sheffield reported ill, the work stoppage expanded until today there were absent 3500 Sheffield men serving 370,000 families and an unestimated number of Borden employes serving 46,200 families. Most of them notified the plants they were indisposed.

Fenton Hibbits, president of the local, said union leaders were "unalterably opposed to the action." WLB Chairman William H. Davis asked union leaders to order the men back to work.

Men, women and children appeared at loading platforms of company milk plants to buy needed milk, carrying it off in vehicles ranging from baby carriages to push carts and taxicabs. As trucks lay idle and unloaded, plant officials and white collar workers, in overalls, dispensed milk to individual customers.

An overnight shipment of 600,000 quarts of raw milk was to be converted by Sheffield into by-products to prevent spoilage because the company reported many pasteurizers failed to appear for work. Company officials said the supply of pasteurized milk might be exhausted today and might prevent future deliveries to hospitals and institutions, permitted by the union. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, however, promised "full and complete protection" to deliveries to city institutions.

Edward O. Mather of the Milk Dealers Association of metropolitan New York said that no milk was being moved by Sheffield in the metropolitan area; that Borden drivers were out in the Bronx, in Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, and in Asbury Park, N. J. Only three retail routes were being served in Paterson, N. J.

Four other milk companies in the city, with 950 employes, were operating normally and providing some relief to consumers.

What does STALIN want?

If you are the ostrich type, believe that the only way to settle any Russian problem is to ignore it, this article will make you mad. If you think a candid analysis of Soviet words and acts somehow smacks of treason, you will be alarmed by David J. Dallin's "Russia's Aims in Europe" . . . an article about Russia's plans for postwar Europe that is as outspoken as Stalin himself. Documented, clearly reasoned and presented, "Russia's Aims in Europe" will frighten only the timid, the muddle-headed, and those strange Americans who side against American interests in any controversy.

Dr. Dallin, the noted Russian historian, went to original sources for this article. On the basis of Soviet pronouncements and performance, he shows what Stalin expects from Poland, the Balkan countries, Germany. He preaches no sermon, merely presents the facts—facts startling to people who prefer illusion to reality in Russian affairs. His article makes clear that no lasting settlement of postwar problems is possible unless we recognize that Russia has her own plans for Europe, until we realistically try to reconcile Russia's aspirations with our own.

"Russia's Aims in Europe" will be widely discussed and quoted. It deserves the attention of every intelligent and far-sighted American. Get it in the October issue of THE AMERICAN MERCURY now on the newsstands.

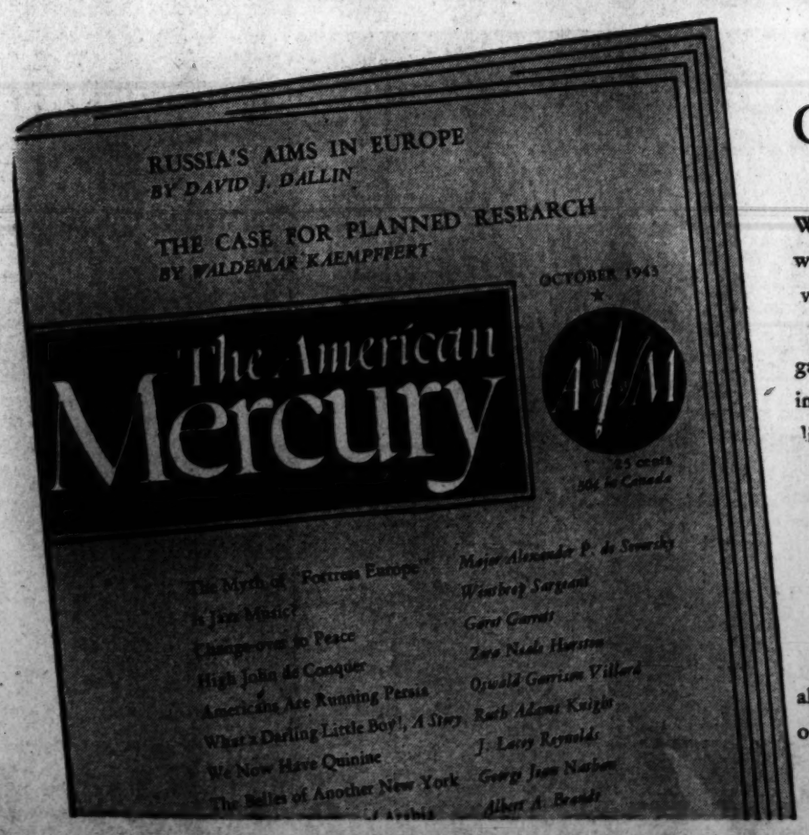
CURES FOR THE COMMON COLD

Despite general skepticism about cures for the common cold, millions of dollars' worth of commercial remedies are bought every year—aspirin, vitamins, nasal drops, vaccines. Are all of these worthless? Are any of them dangerous? Dr. Harold S. Diehl, professor of preventive medicine at the University of Minnesota, in "'Cures' For the Common Cold," one of the most comprehensive ever published on the subject, reports the results of ten years of experimentation. A reading of it will conserve your health. It lists the harmful remedies and introduces you to the "most valuable of all cold medications." In the October AMERICAN MERCURY, now on sale.

"FORTRESS EUROPE," JAZZ, QUININE . . .

The October AMERICAN MERCURY has a rich and varied table of contents. Major Seversky shows the impossibility of "Fortress Europe." A well-known music critic discusses jazz music. The country's leading science writer gets to the core of the controversy over the Kilgore bill on planned research. A distinguished journalist tells a fascinating story of the Americans who are today running Persia. An economist outlines a plan for the change-over to a peace economy. There is an article on how one American army officer broke the Quinine bottleneck . . . And George Jean Nathan's drama column, and Alan Devoe's essay on nature . . . and editorials, poems and cartoons.

The American MERCURY



Opinion that gets action—

Some months ago THE AMERICAN MERCURY ran an article on "Norfolk, Our Worst War Town." It wasn't the most important piece in the issue. It wasn't widely advertised or publicized. But it was informed and documented. And it was of the opinion that something ought to be done about Norfolk.

Now Norfolk was a mess even before the war began. It had been investigated, surveyed, condemned, defended, but nothing happened until the article in THE AMERICAN MERCURY appeared. Then, according to the Associated Press dispatch out of Richmond:

"Governor Darden today made an engagement to discuss Norfolk with Navy Department officials after receiving a letter from Secretary Knox, informing him that President Roosevelt was of the opinion that conditions in the Hampton Roads area are the responsibility of the State.

"Secretary Knox said he had discussed with the President the article, 'Norfolk, Our Worst War Town,' written for the current American Mercury by J. Blan Van Urk.

"After receiving the Secretary's letter today, the Governor made an appointment to visit" etc.

In this opinionated land of ours there are many magazines of opinion—almost as many magazines as opinions. But some opinion is just talk, and other opinion makes things happen.

Raise Favored For Service Dependents

A boost of $10 a month for the wife and first child of a man in the armed forces was approved late yesterday by a House Military Affairs subcommittee.

Chairman Sparkman (Democrat) of Alabama announced that the subcommittee would submit its plan to the full Military Affairs Committee at 10:30 a. m. today and that House action might be obtained early next week.

The bill would boost the monthly allotment for wife and one child from the present $62 to $72.

Other Increases Proposed

A wife and two children would get $80, in place of the present $72. The third child and each additional child would receive $16 a month, in place of the present $10 allotment for each after the first child.

The subcommittee action boosted the scale of children's allowances approved last July by the Senate, but retained other major provisions of the Senate measure.

These include extension of the dependents' allowances from the four lowest to all seven enlisted grades and Government payment of the entire allowance for the first month of the enlisted man's service.

Children of Divorce Benefit

The children's allotments would be payable, too, to the children of a divorced wife, even though the divorce decree were silent on cash support for the children. An exception would be that the second child of a divorced wife would receive $18 rather than $18. The $16 figures would apply to additional children.

The House group also indorsed the Senate plan to retain the present $50 allowance for a childless wife and the Senate scales for dependents other than wives and children.

For example, a parent dependent for chief support on the serviceman would receive $50 a month in place of the present $37, and two parents would get $68 in place of $47. In contrast, two parents dependent only for "substantial" support would be cut from $47 to $37.

The subcommittee also voted to make the bill applicable from the first day of the month following approval, probably November 1.

Planned Tank Output Reduced Two Thirds as Need Changes

Tank production has been cut back to one-third the rate originally contemplated in plans drawn up shortly after Pearl Harbor, freeing valuable facilities, materials and labor for more urgent tasks, it was disclosed yesterday.

Much of the cutback was a paper cutback because our tank production rate was far from proposed peak levels when the first of a series of decisions to curtail output was made. Cuts have been made in production of tanks destined for the British and Russians as well as for ourselves, indicating that United Nations strategists now agree that tanks—although useful war weapons—are not the potent machines we believed them to be when the Nazis were overrunning Europe.

Significance of Change

The tank cutback is a dramatic one because it reveals that our industrial economy is capable of making important shifts without destroying our productive efficiency. It is significant that the most important changes have been made with relatively few "beefs" from management and labor.

Our production planners have followed the policy of making prompt use of all productive facilities released by cutbacks. In this case, the aircraft, locomotive and military vehicle and construction equipment programs were aided materially.

Facilities for the manufacture of tank transmissions are being converted to the manufacture of trucks and tractors. Tank engine plants are convertible to the manufacture of aircraft engines. Tank assembly plants can be used to assemble locomotives and certain types of aircraft.

Shift to Other Products

One of the biggest tank manufacturers has been assigned to the job of making locomotives and tank recovery vehicles. Another one was assigned to making locomotive and hoisting equipment. Cranes and mechanical shovels needed in construction of airbases are being made in some former tank arsenals.

Curtailment of the tank program also released moderate amounts of plate steel which can be used on other types of armored military vehicles. However, amounts released are not sufficient to cause any material change in the over-all steel supply situation, which remains "tight."

FitzGerald Leads In Detroit Primary

Detroit, Oct. 5 (AP).—Early unofficial returns from Detroit's nonpartisan municipal primary gave Frank FitzGerald, who received organized labor's endorsement, a substantial lead in the field of 14 candidates for two nominations for mayor tonight.

The 43-year-old incumbent, Edward Jeffries, trailed FitzGerald but remained well ahead of Charles Bowles, who was recalled in 1930 after a little more than six months in the mayor's office, and Frank Murphy, a former lieutenant governor of Michigan.

In 100 of the city's 1057 precincts the unofficial vote was: FitzGerald 7168; Jeffries, 3832; Bowles 1186; Murphy 665.

'Crushing' Victory Over Japs Demanded

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 5 (AP).—Morris J. Harris, chief of the former Shanghai Bureau of the Associated Press, said today that if the Allies fail to win a "crushing victory" over Japan "we are simply laying the groundwork for another war in the next 25 years."

"The American people must throw aside sentiment and fight for a complete, crushing, military victory, because that is the only kind of victory they understand," Harris told Lancaster civic clubs during a National Newspaper Week program.

IF 12 men find a tree with only 8 apples . . . that's about how it is with SCHENLEY Royal Reserve today. Since before Pearl Harbor our distilleries have made alcohol for vital war needs. Thus the whiskey available today comes only from pre-war reserves. To make these supplies last for the duration, they have to be portioned out. On that basis, there is and will be enough to enjoy in moderation . . . to serve on three occasions now, say—as against four occasions a year ago.

NIAGARA OF ALCOHOL—FOR WAR!

24 hours a day—seven days a week—SCHENLEY distilleries are making alcohol . . . for smokeless powder . . . for rubber that doesn't come from trees . . . for medical and surgical uses . . . for dozens of vital war needs. That's why no whiskey is being made until the war is over. That's why pre-war reserves must be divided up—to see you through.

COME IN, PLEASE...

Fifty years ago Kann's opened its doors here in Washington. And the Kann open door policy has been in effect ever since.

It was the creed of the founder right from the start. Convention demanded that he have a roll-top desk, but there was no law saying he had to be closeted with it. So you'd usually find him giving a helping hand, greeting customers by name, finding out first hand about their needs and tastes.

Kann's is a lot bigger now than it was fifty years ago. But our cracker-barrel friendliness still persists. When you shop here, you're made to feel at home. If you want to talk with the heads of the store, you don't have to dig them out from behind a barricade of secretaries.

Hospitality just runs in the family here. Today the open door is as much a part of the Kann idea as it was half a century back.

D. C. Courts Get Under Way For Busy Term

Preliminaries to what promises to be one of the busiest terms in the history of the District Court were completed yesterday. Regular assignments will begin today.

On the docket for the fall term are more than 400 civil cases and upward of 300 criminal cases. A large percentage of both categories are wartime litigation, such as civil suits by war agencies against industrial concerns, and draft evasion and sedition criminal cases.

Yesterday Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher supervised picking of six jury panels of 20 persons each. Today a grand jury is to be chosen for the full term, while the grand jury hearing the case of the El Patio Restaurant on a possible liquor tax violation involving Larry Kelly, union leader, was continued until January.

Four justices were engaged in disposing of preliminary motions.

Amended assignments of justices were announced as:

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, Motions Court, pretrial court and assignment justice; Justice James M. Proctor, condemnation proceedings and nonjury cases; Chief Justice Eicher, Justices David A. Pine, and Matthew F. McGuire, criminal courts; Justices T. Alan Goldsborough and James W. Morris, jury civil cases; Justices Jennings Bailey and Daniel O'Donoghue, nonjury civil cases.

Three judges will not be on hand for the opening. They are Justice Bolitha J. Laws, now serving as a judge of the United States Emergency Court of Appeals; Justice Oscar R. Luhring, who is seriously ill; and Justice Jesse C. Adkins, who is temporarily indisposed.

Vatican Diplomats Distrust Nazis, Burn Records

London, Oct. 5 (AP).—Diplomats accredited to the Vatican are burning confidential papers in fear that the Germans will violate Papal territory when abandoning Rome, the Daily Mail said today in a dispatch from Madrid.

Issuance of All War News Urged

The radio advisory committee of the Office of War Information yesterday urged the issuance of "all the war news, whether it is good or bad," as soon as military security permits its release.

The statement of nine leading radio executives, issued after their first meeting with OWI, was similar in content to but milder in language than that of the Newspaper Advisory Committee last Thursday.

OPA Prepares Winter Price Ceilings on 13 Fresh Vegetables

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In efforts to head off an upward trend in the cost-of-living index, the Office of Price Administration is working hard to complete—before the snow flies—a "winter-pricing schedule" for fresh vegetables.

When the figuring is over, it is claimed, 13 vegetables will find themselves with price ceilings placed at least 15 per cent below levels current during the last cold months.

The regulations will be so worded and enforced, according to the promises, that fresh vegetables cannot cause a runaway in food prices this winter as they did in 1942-43, when they jeopardized the Government's entire hold-the-line program.

Only three fresh vegetables now have price ceilings. They are lettuce, cabbage and carrots. The 13 ceilings being formulated yesterday supposedly included spinach, other types of greens, tomatoes, snap beans, peas, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, beets, celery, asparagus, sweet potatoes and squash.

Chester Bowles, OPA general manager, has said the winter pricing program will take 1 per cent out of the cost-of-living index and reduce the cost of living really more than that—as several of the vegetables are not "basic" enough to be included in the retail price statistics collected monthly for the index by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

OPA did not release the list of foods being brought under ceilings, apparently fearing "pressure tactics" might be exerted by interested trade groups. Its plan to set a national ceiling for apples resulted in pressure from apple growers, including Congressmen, and the new ceilings—to be announced probably today—will be 1 cent higher per pound than intended.

Also in the works at OPA is a regulation setting forth conditions under which OPA regional offices can make adjustments in retail milk prices. The new rules, which are running into "clearance" difficulties with other food pricing agencies, particularly with the Office of Economic Stabilization, apparently do not aim toward freezing the regions but toward making milk-price adjustments on the regional level practically impossible.

Recently granted a subsidy to cover their increased cost of feed, dairymen in many parts of the country still declare the prices allowed them are so low milk production will be forced continually downward.

In efforts to relieve the feed shortage, felt mostly by dairy and poultry farmers, the Commodity Credit Corporation has asked importers for bids on 1,480,000 additional bushels of Argentine wheat to be sold on deficit areas of the Eastern and Southeastern States. The CCC said it had bought 582,000 bushels of Argentine wheat last week, but did not know when shipments would be expected. The wheat will be made available for feeding at prices comparable to corn and used only for feed.

Another bright spot in the feed-prospect picture was in reports from Chicago yesterday that weather in the cornbelt is unusually favorable and that a national crop of about three billion bushels, second largest in 23 years, now appears "a virtual certainty."

Driver, Truckload Of OWI Statements Disappear Here

By the Associated Press

The Office of War Information was literally at a loss for words yesterday—all because of a missing truck driver.

The driver and his truck loaded with Government announcements disappeared Monday night between the Central Service Agency—where the announcements are copied—and the OWI, where they are distributed to newsmen.

For hours the only release from OWI was a brief item on maximum temperatures in New York City.

Eventually, the reports were recopied again—but the search was still on last night for the driver.

President Cancels Tax Amortization

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered "virtual termination" of a five-year tax amortization privilege granted in 1940 to encourage private expansion of war production facilities.

He signed an amendment to War and Navy Department regulations under which amortization will not be allowed hereafter unless one of the departments has approved the project for amortization before the facility has been begun or acquired.

"Well, sir—the story's something like this"

• WHENEVER YOU'VE driven in here, we've made it a point to greet you before your wheels stopped rolling.

If all you've wanted was directions to Beaver City—or anywhere else—you've gotten them, along with a map and a smile.

If you've wanted more, we have put gas in your tank—checked your oil and tires, cleaned your windshield, and handed you your change so that you could be on your way in a jiffy.

Or, if you've wanted to stretch for a minute—why, our rest rooms have been clean, soap and towels plentiful, and the welcome warm.

In fact, if I do say so, we've always given plenty of service—and with plenty of snap.

Well, I'm still giving you those services. But some of the snap may be missing—along with the lad who used to help me. He's giving a different kind of service now—I hope he'll be back before long.

But, in the meantime, I'm going to stay right here, taking care of the cars and trucks in my neighborhood.

After all, somebody's got to do this. Helping to keep things going here at home is about as important a service as a man like me can give these days.

And if that's true, well—giving service is one thing the station's always been proud of, and always will be.

A Report of Failure and a Call to Action

We failed to persuade Governments to take steps to save the Jewish people of Europe.

Now We Must Turn to Mass Action

The foremost duty of workers in a humanitarian cause is to be honest and sincere with themselves as well as with the public. Nothing is more harmful to the cause one serves than the normal urge to delude oneself with glimpses of success or victory; nothing is more dangerous than to be satisfied by mere words of sympathy and pity from high places. No matter how disagreeable it may be, we refuse to delude ourselves and we refuse to take words as a substitute for deeds.

No, we don't cherish any illusions; during the months between the closing session of the Emergency Conference to Save the Jewish People of Europe and today, nothing has been done by the Allied Governments to stop the slaughter or to alleviate the torments of five million people.

Two months have elapsed since the experts attending the Emergency Conference to Save the Jews of Europe worked out a program that would enable hundreds of thousands of Jews to escape the death sentence passed upon them by Hitler—death by starvation, death in gas chambers, death in front of machine-gun squads.

Two months have passed since this program was presented to our President, to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, to the leaders of both Houses of Congress, to the Ambassadors of the United Nations.

Meanwhile we took other steps

Our co-chairman, the courageous and dynamic Congressman Will Rogers, Jr., flew to England to submit and discuss this program with the British Government. Upon his return he frankly declared:

"I have seen and talked to many leading personalities there; Members of Parliament of both houses, and of all parties and affiliations. I have discussed the problem extensively with Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Richard K. Law, Mr. Eden being absent from London during much of my stay there, and with numerous other Government officials, as well as with our Ambassador to Great Britain, John Winant, and the newly appointed American Vice Director of the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee, Patrick Murphy Malin.

"All of them expressed deep sympathy as to the horrible plight of the Jews of Europe, but I must confess, and I feel it is my duty to state, that the sum total of all my efforts and the continuous efforts of the many British parliamentarians who are sympathetic to the cause, have up to now brought no results whatsoever. Despite the fine expressions of sympathy and understanding, no governmental action has been undertaken by any Government to even attempt, on some tangible scale, to rescue these people, though it has been established beyond a doubt that the vast majority of them could be saved now."

We sent delegates to Turkey and Palestine. Their cabled reports state authoritatively that it is possible to rescue the Jews of Europe if only the doors of the havens of refuge are unbolted by the United Nations. Hundreds of thousands could escape from the Balkan countries to Palestine if the discriminatory immigration restrictions of the White Paper are lifted and the Jews are freely admitted to their own homeland.

On this, too, there has been no official action

MASS PETITION MOVEMENT IS LAUNCHED

WE are not giving up the struggle. On the contrary, we appeal to you to join us in the fight. With the active help of all humane and public-spirited Americans we shall not fail. We must not fail. The lives of four million innocent and helpless human beings are at stake. Democratic governments cannot resist forever the pressure of public opinion. Ultimately they must yield. The voice of indignant Americans can make them do so before it is too late.

500 Rabbis Come to Washington to Petition the President and Congress

Upon the approach of the High Holy Days of the Hebrew New Year and the Day of Atonement, every Jew prepares the balance sheet of his own conscience, and in this particularly horrible year each asks himself whether he has done everything possible to discharge the heavy responsibility each man must bear for the slaughter of an entire people in Europe.

Today, 500 leaders of the Rabbinate, representing American Orthodox Jewry of close to 3,000,000 members of congregations and communities, have come to Washington to impress upon our Government the tragic plight of the Jews of Europe. They will be led by Rabbis Israel Rosenberg, president; Hiam I. Bloch, vice president; Juda L. Seltzer, executive director, and Reuben Levovitz, secretary, of Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States, and by Eliezer Silver, co-president, Union of Orthodox Rabbis, and president of Agudas Israel of America; Wolf Gold, vice president Union of Orthodox Rabbis and honorary president Mizrachi Organization of America; and Solomon N. Friedman, president Union of Grand Rabbis of the United States.

They will present at the White House and the Capitol a petition which pleads for the millions that are still alive.

PETITION

The extermination of an entire people arouses the decent instincts of mankind to demand that immediate and effective measures be taken to stop such barbarous action.

We, Americans, have always upheld the right of all men to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," and have engaged in two world wars on the side of humanity, civilization and democracy.

Therefore, we, the undersigned Americans, call upon the Executive and Legislative branches of our Government to create a special Intergovernmental Agency to save the Jewish people of Europe, with powers and means to act at once and on a large scale.

We also respectfully petition our Government to convey to the British Government, which was entrusted with the Mandate for Palestine, the conviction of Americans that it is against all justice that the Jews alone, of all people, are not allowed free entry to Palestine, and the desire of Americans that the doors of Palestine be opened to all European Jews escaping the death trap of Europe.

We hereby appeal to the President and the Congress of the United States, the guardians of America's humanitarian tradition, to take this action at once.

6,000 Christian Churches Hold Day of Intercession Services

A call to "set aside Sunday, October 10, as a Day of Intercession, when the Christian Churches may lift up their voices to God on High beseeching Him to ameliorate the lot of the Jewish people and to usher in an era of enlightenment and justice," has been issued by the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Rt. Rev. Francis J. McConnell, Resident Bishop of the Methodist Church, and the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church.

"Will you not join us in our day of special prayer by speaking of the plight of the European Jews from the pulpit and offering up words of intercession for them and urging immediate action to alleviate their lot?" reads the appeal. "Will not the members of your congregation form themselves into a committee to work with the Emergency Committee to Save the Jewish People of Europe?"

The fate of millions of human beings lies in the hands of the American people. If Americans call for action, they will get results. If they implement the prayers of the Day of Intercession by organizing committees in their communities to make known the will of the American people, they will save thousands of Jewish communities in France and Denmark, in Rumania and Hungary, in Bulgaria and even in Poland.

If YOU speak up, Governments will listen.

WE HAVE FAITH IN AMERICA

We know that the conscience and humanity of Americans will not accept a policy of inaction in a matter of life and death to millions of people. We have faith that the force of your indignation will enable us to carry out the plans for the rescue of European Jewry before it is too late.

We therefore call upon you for moral and material help in our fight. Add your name to the millions of signatures that will make this petition a powerful instrument of public opinion. Make your generous contribution to enable us to reach our fellow-Americans in every part of our great country. Let America's voice be heard and known.

First Blood

It is a bit like old times, isn't it, to see the Yankees getting off to a great start in another World Series and actually getting such a juju on the opposition that the game was handed to them, so to speak, on a salver? To that extent it recalled the good old days of the fearful Murderers' Row, minus, alas, all the old-fashioned sky-busting, except for Mr. Joe Gordon's homer in the fourth. But that one must have given an extra twinge or two of homesickness to the boys who were listening out in the Pacific or in Africa or in Italy.

But just because this is the first World Series to be getting something like world-wide attention, it seems a pity that it wasn't a better game. We are not thinking so much of the errors, but of the fact that the proceedings lacked melodrama and fireworks. Mr. Lanier's wild pitch in the sixth, which put the game into the soup, was just another of those things; it lacked entirely the Grand Guignol touch so beautifully exhibited at Ebbet's Field a couple of years ago when Mr. Mickey Owen allowed the winning pitch to go through his legs in the ninth. Nor was there anything yesterday like the ninth inning frenzy of the Cardinals in the first game of last year's series. Their sudden fury on that occasion so astonished the Yankees that they never recovered from it. But in the ninth yesterday, the Cardinals went down one-two-three like lambs before Mr. Spud Chandler.

This, of course, does not mean necessarily that they will go down like lambs for the rest of the series. But if they have left in them some of the wonderful vehemence that carried them into the world's championship last year, they kept it pretty well concealed yesterday.

Sweden Protests

What is happening to the Jews of Denmark today is but the tragic repetition of what has happened to the Jews of every country which the Nazis have occupied. Blamed for the militant opposition which has developed in Denmark to the German occupation of that country, they have become the latest victims of Nazi savagery. They are being taken from their homes, separated from their families and deported to the wastelands of Poland, there to be enslaved and ultimately destroyed.

The picture is the all-too-familiar picture of insensate barbarism which Hitler has painted from one end of Europe to the other. It has only one bright spot, namely, the reaction of the Swedish government and people to the plight of these Danes of Jewish faith. From one end of Sweden to the other strong objections to Germany's action have been made, even such a Hitler lover as Sven Hedin joining in the chorus of protest. And the Swedish government, to its great credit, has not only sent a formal note of protest to the German foreign office, warning the Reich that "serious repercussions" will be felt in Sweden, but has also offered to give refuge to the deportees. In taking this stand Sweden is not only living up to its own enlightened tradition but is also serving as the spokesman of humanity.

Mutual Understanding

Under the auspices of the Office of War Information a number of distinguished Americans are now touring England, delivering talks about various aspects of American life to interested groups of Englishmen. The British, in turn, are sending representative speakers over here. The immediate purpose of this program is to promote reciprocal enthusiasm for an accelerated war effort. But it will have even greater usefulness, perhaps, in laying foundations for postwar collaboration between the two peoples. We talk somewhat glibly these days of international alliances. But any alliance is, in fact, merely a formalized expression of joint purposes. Its basis, if it is to have vitality and endurance, must be mutual understanding. The British and ourselves still have a good deal to learn about one another's problems and aspirations.

Writing in last Sunday's New York Times Magazine, Henry Steele Commager, Columbia University historian and one of the OWI speakers, observed that the intense British interest in the United States has by now largely been satisfied in respect to the broader, more general aspects of our way of life. That interest today, he thinks, "is far more sophisticated than it was even a year ago . . . Specifically, then, Britain wants to know about our schools, our hospitals, our system of social services, of agricultural rehabilitation and of conservation." The speakers going overseas for OWI will be able to talk authoritatively about just such matters. They include the Mayor of Portland, Oreg., who will discuss wartime problems and postwar plans of municipalities; an official of the Farm Bureau Federation; the president of the American Association of School Administrators; an advertising executive; the director of workers' education for the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

It would be thoroughly worth while to extend this program to other parts of the British Empire, particularly to Australia and New Zealand. For this is publicity—to use a rather hackneyed term for it—of a most constructive order. The more the people of the English-speaking world know about our problems, aims and methods of approach, the better will be our chances of solving those problems, as they impinge on British interests, in harmony and continuing friendship. Conversely, the better we understand the British point of view, the more readily shall we be able to make sympathetic adjustments to it. Good neighbors are neighbors who know one another well.

Pearl Harbor

Some day, when the war is ended, we shall get to the real roots of the Pearl Harbor mystery. How that most powerful and precious of American protective outposts came to be taken by surprise and dangerously damaged on the fateful morning of December 7, 1941, is a story which the American public has a right to know in its entirety. But little purpose would be served in attempting to unravel it while we are still in the throes of conflict. It is doubtful, indeed, that court-martial proceedings against the two officers could be conducted at this time with the full impartiality and detachment which justice would require. The proceedings would necessarily, moreover, delve into details of our Pearl Harbor defense setup in which the Japanese might still have a keen interest. There is, therefore, propriety and sound sense, we think, in the official announcement that "the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy have concluded that it is undesirable in the public interest to proceed at this time with the trial of Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short."

This is, of course, an implicit promise that these officers will be tried at some future time—a promise which is further reinforced by the fact that both of them have voluntarily agreed to waive the statute of limitations as it might otherwise apply to them. But when the time comes for trial of the officers in command at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, we shall be concerned with much more than their individual responsibility. However greatly they were personally to blame for what occurred, they have already been terribly punished, and little more can be done to mete out justice. We shall find that the blame can not be fixed exclusively upon Kimmel and Short. The court-martial, unless we are vastly mistaken, will arraign a system of divided responsibility for the security of this Nation. Under that system, a corroding interservice jealousy has flourished like the green bay tree. This at bottom was accountable for Pearl Harbor. Kimmel and Short were no more hostile to each other than any of their predecessors. Witness the testimony of General "Billy" Mitchell before a Select Committee of Congress no fewer than 18 years before Pearl Harbor.

> When I was in the Hawaiian Islands, the relations between the Army and the Navy were such that the commanding general of the Army and the commanding admiral of the Navy would not even go to the same social functions together. I have never seen anything like it. Each claimed to be the senior officer, and that each should have the attributes of the general officer who was in charge of the station. The general officer who was in charge at that time, now retired, told me that he had discovered that the admiral in command of the station at Pearl Harbor had made arrangements to take over the City of Honolulu and handle it according to a military system in case of war, but had never notified the commanding general at all. The commanding general told me that in case of war he would take it away from him, even if force were necessary.

It is incredible that this situation should have been permitted to exist from one command to another.

Of course, there are imponderables in the Pearl Harbor mystery which will be explored at the court-martial over Pearl Harbor. How well Kimmel and Short were advised by Washington of the tense relations between the United States and Japan is still not clearly known. It will be the real business of a court-martial to uncover and answer these deeper questions. For only by laying them bare can we learn the lessons necessary to avoid any recurrence of so grave a disaster. But the chief lesson is so plain that even Macaulay's schoolboy could read it. This is that our national security in the perilous days to come can no longer be remitted to a system of defense divided into two armed services which tend to monopolize the loyalty of the persons composing them. There should be one loyalty, and one loyalty only, of our men in uniform, and that is to the American Flag, and it can be insured only by one service under one department of war or national defense. If there is need, in the days when the nostalgia for normalcy returns, for a court-martial to establish that truth in practice, the court-martial will prove a blessing.

Postwar Jobs

Senator George's Postwar Economic and Planning Committee is preparing to begin its exploratory labors by making a general or over-all survey of the outlook for industry and employment after the war. Since the Brookings Institution is cooperating with the committee, there should be no lack of skilled investigators to assist it in this difficult task. Those who talk glibly about the necessity of providing a job for every able-bodied work-seeker when the war is over seldom realize the magnitude and complexity of the employment problem that will confront the country when our war plants are dismantled or "reconverted," our soldiers and sailors demobilized, and millions of employes dropped by war industries.

Prof. Alvin H. Hansen, writing in the September Atlantic, estimates that from 13 to 14 million men and women will be looking for work after the armistice. Even assuming that 3 or 4 million women and workers in the younger and older age groups withdraw entirely from the labor market, ten million people would be left for whom ten million jobs would be needed. Of course, Professor Hansen and other trained economists can only base their estimates of postwar unemployment on their knowledge of past productive needs and accomplishment plus a study of our experiences following World War I. All estimates are necessarily subject to a wide margin of error. But most economists probably believe that a critical employment problem will have to be faced after this war.

Loose talk about a piled-up demand for goods that is counted upon to stimulate revival of civilian industries after the war has to be discounted. It takes a good deal of time and a large amount of investment capital as well as funds for spending to effect a conversion of war industries to peacetime use. Furthermore, if price and rationing controls were to be suddenly removed when the war is over, competitive bidding for scarce goods might lead to a destructive inflationary advance in prices, followed by a costly collapse, such as occurred after the last war. Unregulated postwar spending would unduly stimulate some kinds of productive expansion, leaving other industries inadequately provided for. While it would provide jobs for some people, it would militate against the balanced expansion of peacetime industry that is required to afford a basis for permanent employment.

Despite all that can be done to effect a speedy transition to peacetime pursuits, it may be necessary to provide additional jobs on public works while recovery is getting under way. That is another of the major problems that Senator George's committee will have to consider. Ultimate solution of the postwar employment problem, however, will not be found by voting billions to provide work on public construction projects, as some of our postwar planners recommend. The result of such action would be an aggravated throwback to the years of depression when sums that once seemed vast were dissipated on make-work schemes. Although prediction is always dangerous, we venture to guess that Senator George and the Brookings Institution will not dodge their responsibility by suggesting postwar restoration of a magnified WPA.

Rain In Russia

What the once invincible German army failed to do—halt the great Russian offensive on the Eastern Front—the rains have done. The fall downpour in the region of the Upper Dnieper has made quagmires of the roads and slowed down, though they have not stopped altogether, the westward advance of the Red army. From now on until frost congeals the swampy soil of White Russia, both sides will be vouchsafed a temporary breathing spell. The Russians will be enabled to consolidate the tremendous gains they have made since July, the Germans to strengthen the Dnieper barrier in anticipation of another winter offensive by the Red army.

Their Allies will share with the Russians disappointment that before the coming of the rains Kiev was not taken and the Gomel-Mogilev-Orsha-Vitelsk line pierced. But there is scant comfort for the Germans in this surcease. During the past summer they have lost a vast stretch of extremely valuable territory. And winter, Russia's traditional ally, is not far ahead. In all probability there will then be another offensive by the Red army, one that may very well lead to a Russian break-through to Poland.

The present Russian halt along the Dnieper is, in other words, only temporary. Moreover, because of the curious configuration of that river, with its great bulge at Dniépropetrovsk, Germany's summer retreat has resulted in no real shortening of the German lines. There is every reason to believe, finally, that before the spring thaw the Germans will be facing major opposition not only in Russia but elsewhere in Europe. The dark outlook for the Herrenvolk has not been lessened by the oncoming of the rains.

UNBORN SON

To him I would bequeath a firm estate of mind
Not shaped for overbearing power's usury,
A heart that sings with love of life—though strong, though wise,
Yet with the human weaknesses of her and me—
An eye that knows its God among the clouded mountains
And sees Him in the flowers and the sun,
And hands to fit the silver harp, the ploughshare's haft,
And, as the tyrants walk, a gun.

Siberian Bases

By Mark Sullivan

"Delicate" Topic

SENATOR HENRY Cabot Lodge, jr., returning from an inspection of our war front against Japan, and reporting on it, emphasized what he described as a "major factor" on that front. He told the Senate how great a help it would be to us if Russia would permit us to use air bases in Siberia for bombing Japan. Mr. Lodge, exact-minded, spoke of this as an "if," as a wish. His careful words were:

"I now come to a topic of great delicacy but of such importance to the American people that . . . I feel I must mention it. I refer to the questions raised by Russia's relation with Japan. Certainly all of us who have admired the courage of the Russian people in fighting a dangerous enemy to the death can understand her unwillingness to open a war on other fronts . . . But it is also true that the whole character of the Pacific war would change if the United States had access to the Pacific coastal area of Russia. For reasons of security I shall not say how many American lives would be spared if we receive this aid. I can say that it is a major factor in the whole Pacific picture. It is one of the biggest military facts staring us in the face."

THE SAME point made by Senator Lodge has been made by others, many others. It appears in almost all popular discussions of our war plans and war prospects, and even in some discussions that ought to be well informed. Usually it is expressed as an expectation or probability. That Russia should or will let us use air bases in Siberia is a hope almost as widespread as Santa Claus—and almost as illusory.

A common form of the expectation is that Russia refrains from letting us use air bases in Siberia because she wishes to avoid any cause of war between her and Japan. This is sound enough. But the expectation goes on to assume that as soon as Russia has driven the Germans out of her country, she will thereupon help us fight Japan, by giving us air bases in Siberia and otherwise. Some popular expectation goes so far as to assume that we have some kind of understanding with Russia to that effect.

But the fact is there is no reason for us to expect help from Russia against Japan—at least not before 1946. On the contrary, there is a direct impediment to her helping us. The impediment is a nonaggression treaty which Russia has with Japan. The treaty was made in April, 1941, and is for a period of five years, until April, 1946.

THIS TREATY was alluded to by Prime Minister Churchill, when he was explaining why Premier Stalin of Russia did not attend the conference of President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill at Quebec. Mr. Churchill said that Mr. Stalin could not attend, nor even be invited, because of this "five-year treaty of non-aggression."

Obviously, if Russia's treaty of non-aggression with Japan prevented Premier Stalin from attending a conference of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, it will even more prevent any such overt act as giving us air bases in Siberia from which to attack Japan.

We can hardly be in the position of asking Russia to violate a treaty of non-aggression, for sanctity of treaties is the very basis of the hope of setting up an international machinery for preserving future peace in the world. Whether Russia would feel that she is justified in assuming that Japan has violated the treaty, by Japan's partnership with Germany at the time Germany attacked Russia—whether Russia would feel this is for Russia to decide.

For the United States, the course of prudence is to assume that in our war against Japan we cannot rely on help from Russia. We are obliged to assume that the war against Japan will have to be fought by ourselves, Britain and China.

From this condition flow many considerations, some of them, as Senator Lodge said, are "of great delicacy." Because they are of great delicacy, Senator Lodge was reluctant to discuss them in an open meeting of the Senate.

But there is one consideration that is of no delicacy whatever. It is as undelicate as a dash of cold water in the face. It is that the war against Japan will be longer and more difficult than was supposed by those who have gone on the expectation of early help from Russia.

Witnesses' Troubles

The utter indifference of the courts to the convenience of witnesses has reached a point where miscarriages of justice are likely to be the result. All too often cases are postponed with very slight reason, and after a number of witnesses have come to court ready to testify. After a man has been called from his business two or three times, to testify in some matter of little personal interest to him, only to be told to come back again and again, he gets disgusted. If he thereafter witnesses an accident or a felonious assault, he is likely to disclaim all knowledge of the affair rather than be called half a dozen times to testify as a witness. F. G. CAMPBELL.

Fifth Army

By Paul Schubert

Who Did What?

FROM THE point of view of the reading public, Gen. Mark Clark became established with the warfare of the Mediterranean basin in connection with the much publicized preliminary mission to secure the cooperation of the French.

General Clark was one of those taken to North Africa by submarine. At various points in the adventure he had more or less narrow escapes from capture. He was seized upon by our press and magazines as a romantic personality, and emerged as one of the most clearly identified American figures connected with the initial invasion.

To use the vernacular, he got quite a build-up out of it.

When the fighting began, the public was curious as to what part General Clark would play. The public expected him to be in action. From the public point of view, war news unfolds in much the way that a novel unfolds. If a novelist introduces a character, and then fails to use that character, the reader has a sense of disappointment, frustrated curiosity, and annoyance. The appearance of a general on the stage of war's theater, is followed by a similar anticipation—surely that general wasn't introduced unless he was to play a part in events.

BUT IT developed that Clark was not to be active, as far as the Tunisian campaign was concerned.

Indeed, it developed that despite the presence of American forces in North Africa, the Tunisian campaign was to be predominantly a British affair. We didn't even have an "Army" engaged in it. The British had their First Army and Eighth Army, and we only had a corps.

That was a little disappointing at first, but ultimately there was glory enough for all, and we had quite a satisfying sense of having had a real part in the conquest of Tunisia.

After all, this country is passionately eager to bear a share of the war's combat burden.

Meantime we did form an "Army" in North Africa—the Fifth Army—and General Clark was given command of it.

Good. That explained what General Clark was doing. It also established a new "character"—the Fifth Army—in the drama of unfolding events.

Sooner or later, we felt sure, the Fifth Army would take the stage, and would then establish prowess to match that of the British Eighth Army, which had become the "star" of the Mediterranean drama.

WHEN WE invaded Sicily, people expected that the American forces involved would very likely turn out to be the Fifth Army. But it developed that at Sicily we were using the American Seventh Army—a "new character."

The Seventh speedily established itself as a popular character—it performed just as we hoped it would perform.

The Seventh not only fought. It was one element of "The Fifteenth Army Group," the other element being the British Eighth Army. Seven plus Eight equal Fifteen.

The establishment of the "Fifteenth Army Group" as a "character" in the expanding war, was a brilliant piece of military public relations—a brilliant way to convey alike to the American and British publics, that the invasion of Sicily was a joint operation in which American and British organizations were linked together to form one combat whole.

Our Seventh was part of the Allied Fifteenth.

What could be simpler, or easier to understand.

The war went on.

General Patton's American Seventh Army vanished from the news.

And suddenly, at last, General Mark Clark's Fifth Army appeared—that American Army that he had been training for so many months somewhere in North Africa. Given a job to do at last—a tough and exciting job. Just the kind of job we hoped to get assigned to us.

The public, groping to understand what is going on in this titanic struggle that affects all of us so deeply, instantly accepted the clearly tagged Fifth Army as an American organization.

After a week it developed that the Fifth Army was half British, and that its British components had been doing some of the toughest fighting and suffered the heaviest casualties. It developed that the British were upset because the Army was referred to exclusively as the American Army. . . .

Using the "Fifth Army" tag for this organization was a public relations blunder, and a serious one. Even if all the American troops in it were part of our Fifth Army, it should have been given some new designation to convey the fact of British participation.

Back The Attack

I couldn't refrain from dropping you a note to tell you what a splendid thing I think you and The Post did in sponsoring the "Back the Attack" show.

I think it is one of the best things that has been done—certainly in Washington—to bring the war home to the people and to provide an opportunity for all to get a fuller understanding of what war-making is these days. Having personally been in both the last war and in this one, I have some small conception of the complexity of modern warfare and the enormous amount of mechanical equipment necessary, but even I was fascinated by the "Back the Attack" show. I am sure that it was a very healthy thing for Washington to have had this experience and I am sure the war effort will benefit by it. MEL MAAS,
Representative from Minnesota.
Washington, Sept. 28.

May I extend to you my sincerest congratulations to the unprecedented success of "Back the Attack."

I am sure, that, like me, every friend and reader of The Washington Post is proud of its work!
WALTER VON SCHUSCHNIGG.

May I be among the many to congratulate you and your staff upon sponsoring the third war loan drive by presenting "Back the Attack" September 19 to 26.

Everyone has played his part well and special merit should go to the soldiers and the WACS.

Overseas Assignments

Why won't you devote a little time and discussion to the bill concerning the shipment of WAVES and SPARS out of the continental United States?

Why should girls in the organizations named be stuck in an office to sit day after day as "glorified civilian workers," doing a job that any 10-year-old child could do? Why should we be doing this when we are really needed outside the States and could do an important job well, and really feel that we were helping and contributing to shorten the war?

The WACS were sent overseas, and they are doing a fine job. We could do a fine job, too. We don't mind good, hard, manual labor. Why don't they give us a chance to prove our points?

Shortage Of Nurses

The shortage of nurses has reached a critical stage in civilian life. A good bit of the difficulty in administering hospital care properly is attributed to the lack of nurses, both registered and aides. May I offer a suggestion which I think will alleviate this situation and do away with investigations such as Gallinger is undergoing at the moment.

There is a source of perhaps 1000 to 1500 registered and trained nurses which has not been tapped to date. I refer to those employed in the Government buildings by the various agencies. A nurse thus employed can only administer first aid in case an employe applies for medical treatment. If the case requires more than first aid treatment, the nurse must call in a doctor. In light of this why cannot qualified first aid workers, certified by the Red Cross, replace this vast number of registered nurses in the Government buildings? Since they are on Civil Service rolls, the Commission has the authority to assign them to stations where they are most needed. If the nurses do not answer the call of the institutions which need their services so desperately, the Civil Service Commission can institute change of job location. AMERICAN.

Free Enterprise

The battle cry of "free enterprise" now being advanced by more or less reactionary business interests, is a bit amusing to any one who has a sense of ironic humor, provided he knows the meaning of economic terms.

A case in point is the plea of certain small business interests, expressed in advertising appeals in favor of pending bills S.1122 and H.R.2817. The complaint is that certain large tire manufacturers are creating their own retail outlets, and are thus "undermining free enterprise."

Are these gentlemen not aware of the historically evident fact that such is the nature of "free enterprise," to destroy itself through ruthless competition? The moment you put restraints of any kind upon enterprise, you destroy its "freedom."

I suggest that reactionary Republican phrase makers take a few basic lessons in economics and then get a new campaign slogan for use in the 1944 campaign.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Private Papers Of Private Purkey

Dear Harriet:

Well here I am in Naples or what is left of it and I guess Hitler must of broke that pledge never to take off his uniform until he won the war. This whole territory is so full of flies, fleas and other insects that they could only of come from a uniform that had not been took off for four years.

I never seen so many flies and fleas as there is over here in sunny Italy, especially in Pompeii. There was so many there and they was so tough I thought they was Hitler's new weppon. I now find out that even if we are the best equipped Army in the world General Eisenhower left out the most important thing, which is flyswatters.

Well I serpose you know Italy is a country famous for its old ruins. Harriet, but I can not tell you much about this on account of it is impossibul to tell the old ruins from the new ruins. A buddy pointed out what was left of a building destroyed a thousand years ago and it was in better shape than a lot of places that was built last season.

Take the Buried City of Pompeii, it is serposed to be one of the most famous bunch of ruins in all Italy but it is overrated. I seen it end to end and compared to what them dirty Krauts left of Naples it looks like a modern housing project.

It is plain to see that Naples must of been one of the most beautifull cities in the hole world and the Heinies got a great kick out of destroying it on account of the more beautiful anything is the happier they are when they can ruin it.

If any Italian had a idea at any time that the Germans was nice friends and neighbors he must of had it knocked out of him by what they did to places like Naples the big bums. Vesuvius is the only thing left like it was in the first place and I bet it broke Hitler's heart that he could not find no way to scuttle a volcano.

I gess you read about us capturing a Kraut general asleep. It was no dope. The way things a going nothing a Nazi general could do when awake would be any help. This Krauthead was ready with one of them Nazi alibis. He denied he was asleep and issued a statement saying he was just "withdrawing successfully from insomnia according to plan." When I told the big bum I had ten witnesses he was snoring he said it was "defensive snoring."

Well, honey, there is a old slogan "See Naples and die" and believe you me so far as I am concerned the process was reversed almost. It was a tough job getting here and nothing makes me and the boys so soar as hearing home radio broadcasters getting off a speel about how the resistance was slight. Salerno these eggs broadcasted that the Germans was putting up a stern resistance but we had superiority of airpower, numbers and equipment, and right when it come through I was practically alone on the beach with my gun jammed and I had not seen no U.S. plane for so long I forgot the design!

This war will not end with no armistice. We got to fight another war with them radio stupids. Well, this is about all except to say that the Italians are so friendly it is embarrassing. They don't give much help fighting but they all act like they was guest conductors.

Well, good-bye for now, Harriet, and I hope it will be all over soon on account of I got no postwar world plan except getting you back in my arms.

Lots of love,
OSCAR.

Sumner Welles

Your editorial of the 28th instant is very much to the point that Sumner Welles is "Too Valuable to Lose." There are very few men indeed, if any, who have had the diplomatic world experience of Statesman Welles. That he has strong honest opinions, and is willing to disappear (like England's Eden), rather than give them up, should not be held against him. There is another estimable gentleman at the head of the Department of State, who also has strong, honest convictions. I do not know the matter or matters of disagreement, be it about appeasement or Russia or what not, but they have both proven extremely valuable to our country.

I cannot but recollect that President Roosevelt has leaned heavily on Welles' judgment, not only on good neighbor policies, but on world matters, such as the mission entrusted to him some years ago, to contact the dictators and near-dictators, to ascertain the line-up of the present World War.

I would not be surprised to see Welles emerge from a temporary eclipse as the head of a brand-new set of capital letters, elbowing their place in the sun among the other letters of an overworked alphabet.

Who better than Sumner Welles can represent all the Americas on world councils, now and after the war? H. L. GUEYDAN.

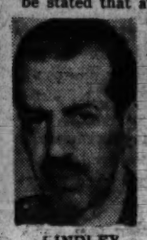
Third War Loan

By Ernest Lindley.

Campaign Ballyhoo



LINDLEY

NOW THAT the Third War Loan campaign has been completed successfully, it reserves to be stated that at least some officials in the Government shared the embarrassment felt by many private citizens during the ballyhoo of the campaign. This is in no sense a reflection on the many thousands of persons, the advertisers, the press and the radio and the movies, and the other institutions which helped to sell bonds. The question is rather whether this is a method on which strong and determined people should rely so heavily to finance a war.

Much of the ballyhoo created or encouraged the idea that individuals who invest in war bonds are performing a highly patriotic service, if not a sacrifice, for which they deserve praise. This is much as if, in normal times, individuals were praised as great patriots for building houses or buying automobiles or spending money on travel for their own enjoyment. In the depression period, such expenditures by individuals produced incidental benefits to the nation as a whole. They put money in circulation. In the war period, every effort must be made to cut down unnecessary expenditures by individuals. This is done by such means as taxation, rationing, the curtailment of production of nonessential goods and services, and by encouraging thrift.

BUT THE individual who puts his money in war bonds is benefiting primarily himself, and only incidentally the Nation. He is putting aside money which will come back to him later, with interest. He should not have to be cajoled and certainly his investment does not merit the thanks of the Government, the Nation, or anyone else except himself, his dependents, and his heirs. To praise him as a patriot is a distortion of values. Some of the slogans and other publicity of the campaign—the theme that they give their lives while we lend our money—were reminders that those who bought bonds were, after all, doing nothing worthy of a medal. But the campaign as a whole utilized many other types of appeal, and their net effect was to make it appear that an investor in war bonds was making some kind of sacrifice. (In some cases, unquestionably, individuals pinched their current living expenditures to make the investment; but in the longer run nearly all of them will be better off as a result.)

The Treasury has clung to the theory that people take a satisfaction from voluntary contributions to the war effort. This has been at the heart of the Treasury's opposition to compulsory savings. It may be granted that most people do get a satisfaction from sacrificing in a good cause. But the theory is wholly misapplied to the sale of war bonds because no real sacrifice is involved. If this had been a campaign for gifts to the Treasury the methods adopted and the energy spent would have been justified. But this was not a campaign for gifts. To apply its theory, the Treasury has to try to create the impression that in buying bonds, individuals are making an important contribution to the war effort and therefore should be happy. Most of us know that is not so.

THE MONEY which the Treasury needs to borrow could be obtained from large investors and through the banks without drawing on small individual savings. It is most desirable, of course, to draw off these smaller savings. On the positive side, the real inflationary pressure comes from millions of small incomes which have been increased during the war. The Third War Loan was organized with the purpose of drawing heavily on small investors. As this is written, the published figures for the Nation do not indicate to what extent the campaign accomplished this objective. Incomplete reports from some sections showed individual purchases lagging behind the quotas. And these individual purchasers included persons with medium and larger incomes.

There are surely ways of financing the war more consistent with the strength and dignity of the people. One way obviously is by increasing taxes all along the line. The idea that either business concerns or a great majority of individuals are taxed now to the breaking point is wholly at variance with the fact, unless we are to confess that, unlike our men in the fighting services, we break more easily than either our enemies or our principal Allies. A second way, softer but probably desirable within limits, is by enforced savings.

When we have been taxed more nearly in proportion to our national means and have adopted compulsory savings on a large scale, war loan drives for the margin of personal savings may be less embarrassing. But even so, one can think of other purposes calling for greater sacrifices to which at least part of the ingenuity, energy, and publicity put into the Third War Loan Drive could well be diverted.

Companies Raid Reserves to Make 1943 Cigarettes

By the Associated Press

Americans are smoking borrowed cigarettes.

They're being, borrowed from next year's supply, and even from 1945 tobacco reserves, the Commerce Department said yesterday in reporting there is a "substantial gap" between demand and supply.

This nation is sharing 42 per cent of its cigarette tobacco supply with other countries under an international distribution system. Referring to this, the department declared in its monthly magazine, Domestic Commerce, that next year's leaf demand "cannot be met."

The demand, it asserted, will be at least as great as the 780 million pounds needed this year, while American manufacturers will be allotted only 468,400,000 pounds of an anticipated 1943 crop of 800 million pounds.

The Gallup Poll . . .

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 5.—The favorable military events of the last six weeks, which include the surrender of Italy and the steady German retreat in Russia, have brought only a slight increase in public optimism over the length of the war.

The average voter still thinks it will take another full year to bring Germany to her knees, and another two years to defeat Japan. Since the middle of August a larger number of persons have come to the conclusion that the war will be over in Europe by Christmas, but the increase is only from 8 per cent to 12 per cent. About two-thirds of the adult population look for an end to the European phase of the fighting during 1944, and more particularly during the second half of 1944.

Popular Pastime

No one can do any more than guess, of course, but guessing the length of the war is becoming one of America's favorite indoor pastimes. The British are also indulging in it—so much so that Prime Minister Churchill felt constrained to comment on the subject in a recent speech. The guesses, while they have little significance as predictions, assume real importance in relation to various phases of the war.

The problem of absenteeism in war plants, for example, is ascribed by some Washington experts to over-optimism concerning the war. A person's belief as to the length of the war may also have an effect on his purchase of war bonds, his attitude toward taxes and many other matters.

Latest Survey

The public's estimates have been recorded at periodic intervals in surveys by the Institute. The results of the most recent study, and a comparison with a similar study in early August, are shown below.

How much longer do you think the war with Germany will last? With Japan?

Public's Guesses

Length of war with Germany

	August Poll	Today
In 1943	8%	12%
First half of 1944	31	28
Last half of 1944	34	38
In 1945	18	11
Later than 1945	5	4
Unwilling to guess	4	7

	August Poll	Today
In 1943	1%	1%
First half of 1944	6	7
Last half 1944	17	20
In 1945	36	40
Later than 1945	35	25
Unwilling to guess	5	7

In some respects there has been a greater increase of optimism over the war against Japan in recent weeks than over the war with Germany. The number who think that the Japanese will meet their defeat either in 1944 or in 1945 is larger today than it was last August, while there has been a sharp decrease in the total expecting the Pacific war to continue past 1945.

These changes are a reflection, undoubtedly, of General Douglas MacArthur's recent successes in the New Guinea area, and of the prospects for action implied by the appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten to command of the South Pacific area.

Conference Opens to Map War On Deadly Rheumatic Fever

By Frank Carey

Associated Press Science Editor.

A call for "commando assaults" throughout the Nation on rheumatic fever, foremost killer of children of school age, was sounded yesterday at the opening of a national conference of medical authorities seeking agreement "on the best and newest methods" for treating the disease.

Dr. Martha M. Eliot, associate chief of the children's bureau of the Department of Labor, which is sponsoring the three-day meeting, said the sessions marked the first gathering of public health officials with men doing research on the problem, and she declared a highlight of the conference would be a roundup report of six years' employment of sulfa drugs in seeking to prevent recurrences of the fever.

Prolific Cause of Death

Rheumatic heart disease, resulting from the fever, Dr. Eliot said, "causes more deaths among children than whooping cough, measles, meningitis, diphtheria, scarlet fever and poliomyelitis combined."

Asserting that 13 States have special services for children suffering from rheumatic fever, financed with aid of funds appropriated by Congress to the Children's Bureau, Dr. A. L. Van Horn of the bureau's staff declared:

"These special State programs are making invaluable commando assaults on this foe of the hearts and lives of children, but if we are to save all the thousands of children from the worst effects of this cruel disease, these assaults must be made on all 48 State fronts, not just on 13, and in many hundreds of communities within each State which are not now reached even in the States having programs.

Wartime Need Acute

"Now, above all times, we must be on the alert, since wartime conditions in overcrowded areas can easily spread the infection."

Rheumatic fever, of which the exact cause is not known, usually begins in childhood, but sometimes the first recognized attack does not occur until adult life. It may affect the joints, the nervous system, the skin or the heart.

Col. Leonard G. Rowntree, director of the Selective Service medical division, told the conference that of 13 million men examined for military service, 230,000 were put in 4-F classification because of ailments of the heart. And a study of a selected group among those so classified, he said, indicated that 50 per cent had heart trouble resulting from rheumatic fever.

Army Tries to Bar Them

Brig. Gen. Hugh J. Morgan, medical consultant of the Army Surgeon General's office, said the Army sought to prevent the entrance into service of men who had had a single attack of rheumatic fever attended by complications.

Of those suffering initial attacks after their entrance into service, he said, the greatest incidence is among men stationed in Rocky Mountain States, with those stationed in the New England States being second. This geographical incidence is typical of the situation regarding civilian cases, doctors said.

Crews of 3 Destroyers Learn Their Mines Sank 4 Jap Ships

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 5.—The story of a strange sea victory in which four ships of a Japanese task force were sunk without a shot being fired, and while United States vessels were many miles away, was told by seamen here today.

The Navy confirmed the bare details.

"Heroes of the victory were three old-type, four-stack destroyers, veterans of World War I, no longer fit to engage in fast-striking, hard-hitting modern war, and converted to minelayers.

During the summer the Navy had reason to believe the Japanese would try to reinforce holdings in the Solomon Islands. Minelayers were given charts of waters through which enemy convoys might pass. Mines were laid and the destroyers went about other business.

Then a Japanese task force ventured into the area. An explosion tore one ship apart and it sank. Japanese escort ships swarmed around, concluding a submarine had attacked. Another explosion sent a second ship to the bottom, and as the enemy ships tried evasion tactics, others were blown up.

Aerial reconnaissance the next day disclosed that four Japanese ships had been sunk, and that probably several others met the same ftae.

The old destroyers now proudly bear four little Nipponese flag painted on their sides.

House Group Urges Unified Agency for Oil

Establishment of an independent Government agency to handle production, refining, transportation and distribution of petroleum was recommended yesterday by a House Naval Subcommittee.

In a report critical of administration of the petroleum supply, the committee, headed by Representative Rivers (Democrat) of South Carolina, also urged that the price of crude oil and refined products be raised to meet the increased cost of finding, developing and producing petroleum.

"Testimony presented shows beyond question an almost critical shortage of petroleum and its products," the report said. If this condition continues, America will soon become a dependent Nation as far as petroleum is concerned. It is the duty of Congress to provide every incentive which will stimulate new discoveries of oil to the point where our reserves are again adequate for future needs."

Other Recommendations

The committee also recommended that:

1. The War Manpower Commission review it regulations with a view to permitting draft deferment to skilled personnel engaged in work connected with production, petroleum exploration and the development of new reserves.

2. The War Production Board make available to the petroleum industry increased amounts of materials needed to find, produce and transport petroleum.

3. Regulations granting priorities for materials be simplified to permit wildcatting, exploration and production to go forward with a minimum of governmental red tape and delay.

Chesapeake Pipeline

4. The proposed crude oil pipeline from Texas to the Chesapeake Bay area be constructed as soon as possible to relieve the shortage on the East Coast and the great strain on railroads involved in transporting petroleum by tank car.

5. State petroleum regulatory bodies be given a free hand in determining the rate at which oil is to be produced in each State without Federal interference.

The committee recommended that the House Naval, Military and Interstate Commerce Committees sponsor legislation to place all oil administration under one government body, which would take over petroleum functions from the Petroleum Administrator for War, the Office of Price Administration, the Department of Interior, Maritime Commission, War Production Board and Office of Defense Transportation.

Roosevelt Says He Will Vote for Haskell in N. Y.

President Roosevelt said yesterday he expected to vote for his old friend and associate, Lieut. Gen. William N. Haskell for Lieutenant Governor of New York. Haskell is the Democratic and American Labor Party candidate.

Asked if he had any comment on the candidacy of William C. Bullitt for Mayor of Philadelphia, the President said at his new conference that he had a long-standing practice of not discussing mayoral races except in his own State of New York. Referring to Bullitt as "Bill," he remarked that the former Ambassador to various countries was an old friend, and volunteered that he was glad Bullitt was going to run.

Inquiry Sought

First Lady's Film Under Capitol Fire

By the Associated Press

Asserting that newsreels to be shown in theaters today will record Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt classing "Japs and Republicans as common enemies," Representative Ploeser (Republican) of Missouri said yesterday he would demand a congressional investigation of use of the motion picture industry for propaganda purposes.

The newsreel, Ploeser said, was made by the Marine Corps while the President's wife was in the South Pacific. The final scene, he said, shows her telling a story of a marine who said he would not shoot into a group of Japs who shouted "To hell with Roosevelt!" because the marine did not want to shoot a fellow Republican.

Movie Company Accused

The Missourian also contended a motion picture company recently "went out of its way" to give the President credit for obtaining pay increases for servicemen "when actually Administration lobbyists fought the legislation."

In New York, spokesmen for three of the four large newsreel companies said the scene was being used in its entirety or in part. The fourth, Pathe News, said the scene had been deleted.

A Paramount News official said that laughter drowned out the last of the Mrs. Roosevelt remarks so that they were being written on the film as follows: "What could I do? I couldn't shoot a fellow Republican."

Cut Because of Laughs

Universal Newsreel said the shot was used through the "to Hell with Roosevelt" portion, but was cut at that point "because the laughs drowned the rest out."

News of the Day has used the entire scene.

The Pathe News spokesman, who declined to be quoted by name, said that "Mrs. Roosevelt was just telling a joke—and it's the President's favorite joke—so why should anyone get excited?"

Malvina Thompson, secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt, who is at the Roosevelt Hyde Park home, said Mrs. Roosevelt had no comment on Ploeser's planned action.

OPA Order Hits 'Dealers' Used Car Dodge

By Watson Fenimore

International News Service Staff Writer

The Office of Price Administration ordered dealers yesterday to sell their new cars to financially qualified holders of new car ration certificates.

The order, effective Saturday, is designed to end alleged widespread refusal of dealers to release new automobiles unless eligible purchasers have old cars, which they can offer as trade-ins.

Many Unable to Get Cars

Under the dealers' "strike," it was explained, many physicians, clergymen, public officials, war workers and others who may legally obtain new automobiles have been unable to do so.

Dealers were represented as being eager to acquire second-hand cars by a trade-in because of the high prices prevalent in the used-car market. Some dealers also were said to be refusing to make new-car sales so as to avoid paying additional excess profits taxes for this calendar year.

Used Car Ceiling Plan

The OPA has been working for months on a proposed used car ceiling plan to curb inflationary prices in this field, but the regulations, it was learned, still are enmeshed in a protracted "clearing process" in the agency.

Dealers who refuse to dispose of their new automobiles after Saturday face expulsion from business in rationed cars or refusal of permission to add storage expenses to the maximum prices of their cars, OPA said. The latter provision will apply to all cars in a dealer's hands.

The new regulation, OPA added, will "assure that dealers shall sell cars on a first come, first served basis to persons who present ration certificates."

Equal Rights Amendment Killed

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday killed a proposed constitutional amendment which would have given women "legal equality" with men.

The so-called equal rights amendment—designed primarily to remove some State barriers against women's jury service and other legal technicalities—was voted down 11 to 15 in the committee.

A similar proposal has been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Defenders Reestablish Positions on East China Front

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Oct. 5.—Chinese forces on the East China Front have established their positions in the Hankow-Nanking area along southern banks of the Yangtze River with the recapture of Fanchang, 20 miles southwest of the important river port of Wuhu, the Chinese announced today.

Farther to the east, Japanese forces in the Hsuancheng region, 80 miles south of the former capital at Nanking, suffered heavy losses and were forced to retreat after a night-long battle.

The daily communique also recorded clashes in the Kiangsi and Shantung Provinces.

In other sectors between Hangchow and Nanking, the Chinese said they were engaging the Japanese invaders in fierce fighting.

The Japanese air force was out in strength yesterday, making heavy attacks on Kweiling, capital of Kwangsi Province, and Shiukwan, capital of Kwangtung. A large number of Chinese refuges at Shiukwan were subjected to a concentrated rain of incendiary, delayed action and fragmentation bombs.

The Japanese continued their raids on Kienow, an important highway center in northern Fukien Province.

Benefit Cavalcade Of Negro Music Listed for Tonight

For the benefit of a nursery fund and other community projects, the Howard Park Civic Association will sponsor a Cavalcade of Negro Music at Griffith Stadium at 8 o'clock tonight.

William L. Tancil, president, said yesterday that the proceeds of the evening will be devoted entirely to much-needed facilities for children of civilian workers for whom no Lanham Act funds are available. Plans, he declared, have already been completed and await only the necessary money for being put into operation.

The musical show at the stadium will include classical as well as jazz music and will present an impressive array of talents.

Participating in the program will be the Southernaires, singers of folk songs and spirituals; the Deep River Boys; Ethyle Wise and Avis Andrews, a newly discovered feminine Negro voice; Billy Eckstein, Washington concert debutant in the concert field after many years of serving as an orchestra vocalist; Aubrey Pankey, baritone; Art Tatum, blind pianist; Lucky Millinder and his orchestra, and others. Richard Huey will serve as master of ceremonies.

Accident Cost Put At 270 Million Days

• Chicago, Oct. 5 (AP).—Accidents, most of them off-the-job, cost the war effort 270 million days of work in 1942, enough to build 63,000 fighter planes, the National Safety Congress was told today.

"It is double sabotage: we commit it ourselves and it costs the enemy nothing," said C. C. Carlton, Lansing, Mich., vice chairman of the Automotive Safety Foundation.

LETTER FROM AUSTRALIA. Priscilla Naecker, the little one who used to publicize the Carlton and Wardman Park Hotels, is now with the Red Cross, writes enclosing a newspaper picture of herself with Ray Bolger and Little Jack Little, who'll be returning to Washington and El Patio in a few weeks. Says Priscilla: "Little Jack Little spent hours talking to me about "back home," about you and all the rest of our friends back there . . . It seemed that Bolger liked to dance a little. So we spent a lot of time together—dancing . . . Mary, I love my work and the excitment out here. I never realized before what 'being busy' meant. Sleep is a waste of time and I find that I can do with lots less in this climate and get along nicely . . . When Mrs Roosevelt arrived in this country, I was assigned to her party as A. R. C. secretary and traveled with her group by plane for about a week . . . Do write and give me the news of some of the people I knew once upon a time."

Del Courtney and his band, now putting out engaging harmonies at Del Rio, have been booked into Chicago's Black Hawk Inn for a three-month stay after leaving Washington.

ROAMING RESTAURATEURS RETURN. Manager A. J. Peterson is back in Mayfair after a swing around the country big enough for a Presidential candidate . . . Huey Liang is back at the wheel of the Casino Royal after a few weeks on the West Coast, spent mostly in San Francisco . . . Julian Richards of the Old New Orleans is looking fresh as a bunch of daisies after vacationing in Pennsylvania and on his Virginia farm.

LADS IN UNIFORM. Remember "Laddy" Puryear, former owner of the Robin Hood and brother-in-law of Eve Knight of the King Cole Room? He's won his lieutenant's bars, is now in Utah. . . . When a handsome aviator with a game leg was having a time between his crutches and the revolving door at Ruby Foo's, a snappy WAC officer was the first to give him a hand . . . Lieut. Burt Lopatin of the Coast Guard (owner of Burt's Trans-Lux) writes that he gets a kick out of watching the salmon go up to spawn in Alaska's icy streams . . . Jane Marlow and the Heintze Brothers of Restaurant "823" are entertaining soldiers under the sponsorship of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Kay Arden, star pianist of the Neptune Room, will transfer her vibrant skill and charm to the Cotillion Room of New York's Hotel Pierre about November 1.

FLOOR SHOW FLASHES. Doing "Chapenacas" with staccato handclaps are the Lotus Dancettes, all eight of 'em. And dressed up in white fur chaps with turquoise trim . . . The "Russian Harvest" of the Balalaika's new show has a stunning mural background of yellow wheatfields and bright blue sky . . . Owen and Parker at Paul Young's have a parody on "Blues in the Night." They call it "Burps in the Night" . . . There's a big new show at Kavakos Grill. It's headed by Frankie Donato (now in his sixth week), includes impersonator Sonny Collette, Patricia Gallagher, red-headed blues singer; ballroom dancers Trinker and Lynn.

IN THE HIT PARADE. The new Durward Bowersox dance band in the Dubonnet Room is presenting captivating rhythms that sound like a perfect imitation of musical perfection. The Dubonnet customers are in a state of feverish delight . . . The Louis Betancourt Orchestra at La Conga plays waltzes with a Viennese swing that's as authentic as the Latin-American beat of their rumbas . . . Jerry and Georgia of the Anchor Room give a young and gay touch to all their songs. It explains why their contract was recently renewed and they now seem to be Anchor fixtures.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Huge Building Program Seen

A 30-billion-dollar postwar construction program by the Nation's cities is indicated by a just completed survey, the National Association of Real Estate Boards announced yesterday.

The association said that in the 287 cities actually studied there is approximately $1,500,000,000 of construction definitely planned as soon as war bans are lifted and materials available. For the combined population there is $516 of new building per person planned.

Applying this average to the country as a whole, the association said it figured there is a deferred backlog of construction running well over 30 billion dollars.

Long-postponed public works, such as sewer systems, streets and hospitals which will take up to five years to complete, are the largest single group of projects well assured for immediate postwar construction, the association stated.

Balanced Budget "Possible"

The national budget can be balanced "in the not too distant future," F. W. Hubbell, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. of Iowa, Des Moines, Iowa, said yesterday.

"After the war the investment situation will change," he said. "Government deficits will decrease rapidly and in the not too distant future the national budget can be balanced."

In a speech prepared for delivery to the financial section of the American Life Convention, Hubbell predicted postwar taxes would be decreased, but would remain higher than they were before the war.

Life insurance company investments in the near future are "very clearly defined," he said. "It can be said in two words—Government bonds."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Films Do Amply Right By Our Gal 'Claudia'

THOSE WHO MISSED the stage version of Rose Franken's "Claudia"—if there be any such—will have opportunity to remedy the omission when the Twentieth Century-Fox version of the long-run comedy-drama comes along to a Loew screen, as it will in the reasonably near future.

DOROTHY McGUIRE

Yesterday morning's preview revealed that in adapting the hit which had its premiere here at the National Theater, Morrie Ryskind adhered with fine fidelity to the major theme of the original work—the evolution of a scatter-brained child-wife into a young woman of sturdy character who could "make friends with pain" and meet life on its own unpredictable and frequently heart-breaking terms.

Patrons of the stage play will miss the innocent frankness of certain passages of its early dialogue, but still will find comedy present in abundance. They also will see four members of the original cast in the roles they created. These are Dorothy McGuire, as effective in celluloid as she was on the boards; Olga Baclanova, as the Russian diva, and Frank Tweddell and Elsa Janssen, as the Norton servants, harassed by their own family problems.

Ina Claire makes her first screen appearance in too long a time as Mrs. Brown, the mother, and Donald Cook is succeeded in the gelatins by Robert Young, who plays the role of the husband in less persistently comic vein, but with equally telling effect.

All of which is not to review the picture in advance, but merely to suggest that it is something to look forward to.

This column's incessant banging away since last May on the desirability of some such eventuation had nothing to do with it, but it nevertheless is a happy circumstance that the Army high command finally saw fit to include Washington in the brief tour of "The Army Play by Play," the smash hit now at the National for the benefit of Army Emergency Relief. And the Capital is luckier than it knows, because that tour really is brief. Producer John Golden thought the composite idea up as a means of staging a one-night benefit in New York for the Soldiers and Sailors Club. After a "command performance" at Hyde Park the value of a road tour became apparent. The five prize-winning, one-act plays therefore were given 30 days additional lease of life. That now has been extended to 60 days but the tour limited to principal cities in four Army Service Command areas. "The Army Play by Play" goes from here to Richmond, thence back to Wilmington. And that winds it up—barring another extension. No judicious amusement-seeker will miss it.

Some of the specialists appearing between the playlets already are "set" professionally immediately the war is over. Jules Munshin, for one. His opeartic nonsense and Shakespearean train-calling have so intrigued the Broadway impresarios that they are practically falling over each other to tie him up to a postwar contract, with one of the most famous having the inside track. The Arnaut Brothers, the third generation of "two loving birds" as I recall it, of course, have been headline fixtures in vaudeville for years.

That's Quite a Pile of Money!

According to latest, but still incomplete, computations, the motion picture industry thus far has compiled war bond sales of $1,670,528,943.25, according to announcement by cochairmen John J. Payette and Carter T. Barron of the War Activities Committee in Washington.

On its coast-to-coast tour of 15 cities, the Hollywood Bond Cavalcade accounted for $1,079,586.819. The five heroes from the fighting fronts making up the War Veterans Airmada, with picture stars acting as masters of ceremonies, totaled $254,238,272 in 50 cities. Exclusive of these receipts, the industry to date has tallied $336,852.25 in bond sales through its theaters in 43 States, on the basis, as we were saying, of incomplete reports.

It has already come out that following "Oklahoma's" two weeks at the National, beginning October 18, the Theater Guild-American Theater Society's next two subscription plays will be "Uncle Harry," with Eva Le Gallienne and Joseph Schildkraut, and "The Patriots," costarring Walter Hampden with Julie Haydon. The one is being referred to by astigmatic ticket buyers as "Uncle Charlie"; the other, as "The Pioneers," not that it matters. Miss Schreiner somehow manages to get the idea. The remaining three plays for the 1943-44 subscription season, by present indications, will be new and as yet unproduced works, at least two of them Guild productions.

Word filters out of Hollywood that Alexander Knox, described as a "dark horse," wins the prize part of the year on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot—that of the title role in "Woodrow Wilson." Mr. Knox may be a dark horse on the West Coast but not on the East, where most recently he appeared in the title role of "Jason" and with Katharine Cornell in her all-star revival of Chekhov's "Three Sisters," in which, incidentally, he did beautiful work.

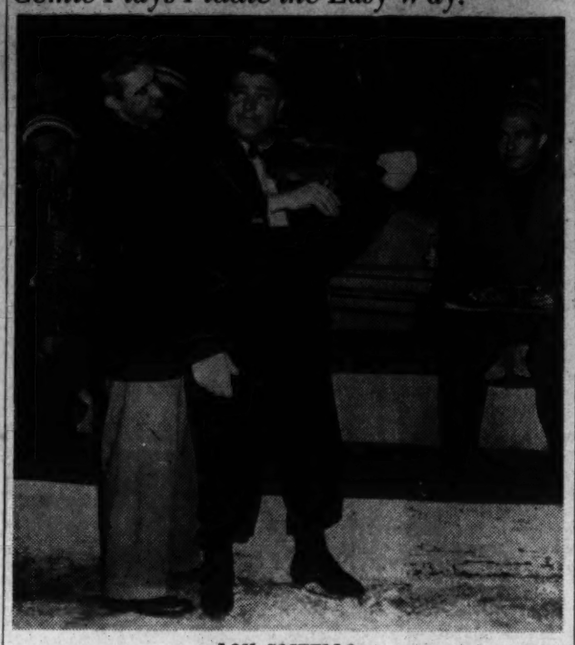
Comic Plays Fiddle the Easy Way!



LOU COSTELLO,

the rotund half of the partnership of Abbott and Costello, indulges in a bit of musical whimsy in "Hit the Ice," latest Universal vehicle for the zany team, opening tomorrow on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. His accomplice above, of course, is not Bud Abbott, but Orchestra Leader Johnny Long, immensely popular here in the Capital

HEDDA HOPPER

Itinerants in Italy!

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 5.—Jack Benny phoned me from New York, tired but happy after his overseas tour of Army camps. He said it's been the most wonderful experience of his whole life, and added, "If I'd start to tell you by long-distance how much we all think of those boys we met over there, Hedda, I wouldn't have enough left to come home. But when I get there I'll really tell you!" Jack and his gang were the first entertainers to go to Italy, and here's how it happened. It was planned for him to entertain certain troops in Sicily, but when they got there those troops had already gone on to Italy. Jack got permission to follow them, but the commanding officer wasn't notified, so when Jack showed up the amazed officer yelled, "Jack Benny! What the hell you doing here?" Jack explained they'd come to entertain the boys about to go out on missions, and they got a welcome they'll never forget.

JACK BENNY

Giving Her All

Joe Ruttenberg, who's photographing "Gaslight," wondered why Ingrid Bergman didn't look well on the screen, so he asked her what she'd been doing. She said, "I've decided I look much too healthy for the part, and for the last week I've been drinking black coffee to keep me from sleeping. I hoped to get that sunken look!" Joe said, "You take care of your health and let me look after your photography." . . . Manny Reiner writes from Iceland: "After reading in your column (yes, we get it here) about your visit to the 'Gaslight' set, thought you'd like to know we're producing 'Angel Street' up here with an Icelandic actress making her English speaking debut, a soldier, an Army nurse, and a Red Cross worker. And in spite of great difficulties, it looks as though it might be a hit Everybody's crazy about 'Command Performance,' 'Mail Call,' and other platter shows coming from Hollywood. No doubt about it, Hollywood is MORALE in capital letters."

This and That

Dick Haymes, already in town, singing in "Four Jills and a Jeep." Haymes is tops in the juke box parade . . . James Melton flew out for a Metro test. Hear his price is $700,000 per picture . . Elliot Paul, who did a screen play for "Rhapsody in Blue," will do the same service for "Green Mansions." The Rockefeller Foundation is cooperating in this production because of its South American angle . . . Judith Gibson, Lady Mendl's protege, gets the lead opposite Bela Lugosi in "The Return of the Ape Man" at Monogram . . . Even though Betty Jaynes is going to have a baby, she's doing some terrific singing in "Mr. Co-ed" . . . Ozzy Nelson and Harriet Hilliard will be in "Rhythm Ranch" with Jack Haley and Bill Frawley already set . . . Errol Flynn is worrying much more over the little matter of back income taxes to the tune of $121,000 than he ever did over any minor misdemeanor, 'cause money is something that hurts Errol's feelings no end.

Newcomer Claudia Drake, in "The Life and Loves of Dr. Goebbels," looks just like Bessie Love when she started. There's a new German actor named Paul Andor in it, and W. R. Frank, theater owner from Minneapolis put up the money.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Oct. 5.

Last week John Golden took Eleanor Roosevelt to Sardi's for lunch. On their way out, Golden introduced Mrs. Roosevelt to Renee Carroll, the hat-check girl. "Eleanor," he began, "Renee is the most famous hat-check girl in the world. And rightfully so, because she is the best. She's been at her job a long time, and knows it well" . . . Mrs. Roosevelt acknowledged the introduction, and Golden then started to leave with her. "That wa. nice of you," Miss Carroll told him, barring his exit, "to tell Mrs. Roosevelt I know my business well. And I do know it. That's why I'm reminding you, Mr. Golden—you forgot to tip me for checking your hat."

JOHN GOLDEN

The theater shortage on Broadway is so acute that Max Reinhardt, who has the cast and the $150,000 necessary for the production of "La Belle Helene," has had to postpone the rehearsals . . . Sigmund Romberg, whose current concert tour is a success, will use all the profits to produce a new musical, which he is writing . . . Fred Allen has an unusual movie deal—in which he accepts, in lieu of salary, stock in the corporation which is producing the movie . . . Quentin Reynolds returned from Moscow and Salerno with 70,000 words written for his next book . . . The irrepressible Swifty Morgan has signed a long-term radio contract.

Lieut. Col. John T. Winterich, who has an office in the Pentagon Building in Washington, received a telephone call while a visitor was with him. The call was a brief one . . . "That was a weather report," Colonel Winterich told his guest—who then asked him: "About the weather at one of the fronts?" . . . "Oh, no, This was a regular report on how the weather is outside of this building," explained Colonel Winterich. "You see, I'm a half-mile from the nearest window."

W. Averell Harriman, who was appointed Ambassador to Russia last week, had a series of unusual adventures in making his first trip to Moscow, two years ago. Harriman and Lord Beaverbrook headed the Anglo-American mission. Their plane was fired upon when they were leaving England, and antiaircraft fire also greeted them when they crossed into Russia. Their pilot saved them by diving to a clearing between some trees. When they finally came to Moscow, Stalin said: "I'm sorry you had such trouble" . . . "What a war," said Harriman. "I've been shot at by British and by Russian guns—but never by German guns."

Harriman is tall, handsome and youthful. When his daughter told him she was about to become a mather, she said: "Dad, I think it's time to start calling you 'Grandpa.'" Harriman replied: "No. I think it's time to start calling me 'Averell'" . . . He"s noncommunicative in discussing his war jobs. When he returned from the winter in Moscow, the only thing he told his family was: "It's cool there" . . . In 1939 Harry Hopkins invited Harriman to a conference of business leaders in Washington. His wife, Marie, who has closed her noted art gallery to devote herself to war work, was asked, during that conference, whether it presaged a political career for her husband. "No," said Marie. "And I don't want to be a Mary Todd. I'd much rather be an Anne Rutledge."

Michael O'Shea, who played in the Kaufman and Hart show, "The American Way," and who later worked for Sam H. Harris, received his medical discharge from the Army last week, after 14 months in the service. O'Shea then hired to appear in Maurice Schwartz' Yiddish production of "Golden Fame" . . . Elizabeth Janeway's new novel, "The Walsh Sisters," now is in its third printing. Almost every Hollywood studio has entered a bid for the film rights . . . Stettinius' appointment as Undersecretary of State was announced prematurely, as far as his wife was concerned. They had to rush back from the Coast, where Mrs. Stattinius had been scheduled to fulfill a long-cherished ambition—to christen a new ship.

German-American Group, 27 Members Indicted

Attorney General Francis Biddle announced a Federal grand jury at Newark, N. J., returned an indictment yesterday charging the German-American Vocational League, Inc., one subsidiary and 27 officers and members with illegally conspiring to act as Nazi agents without proper notification to the United States Government.

The Attorney General said the return of the indictment climaxed "one of the most complex and widespread investigations undertaken by the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

The German-American Vocational League, Biddle said, has headquarters in New York and branches in Rochester, Newark, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Louis, Kansas City, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle.

Propaganda Work Charged

The indictment charged that the league, under direction of the German Reich government, "served the interests of the same by making use of its local chapters for the purpose of spreading and disseminating the propaganda issued by the government of the German Reich."

The principal objective of this propaganda, the Government charged, was to obtain acceptance of national socialism in the United States and to prevent American participation in the war.

Biddle said the indictment set out alleged relationship between the league and the National Socialist Workers (Nazi) Party in Germany from January, 1933, to January, 1942, the period of the alleged conspiracy.

Conspiracy Charged

The defendants were accused of conspiring to violate the Notification Act of June, 1917, by acting as agents of a foreign government without prior notice to the Secretary of State and with violating the Foreign Agents Registration Act by failing to register properly with the Department of Justice.

Penalties provided under the conspiracy statute are imprisonment for not more than two years or a fine of not to exceed $10,000, or both.

The Justice Department said that three of the individuals named in the indictment were in Germany and 24 in the United States. Of those in this country, one was in the Army, one in jail, two interned, three excluded from the West Coast by the Army and 17 at liberty.

Nazis Arresting Vichy Officials

Stockholm, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Germans are making "mass arrests" in the Vichy government preparatory to taking over the Vichy administration, the Zurich correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter said today, quoting a foreign diplomat arriving in Switzerland from France.

The arrests are being made mainly in the Vichy ministries of information, foreign affairs and interior and the Germans are exercising the sharpest control over all communications with Vichy, the correspondent said the diplomat told him.

WAC, Back Home From African Battle Area, Rushes for Soft Drink

By Emily Towe
Post Staff Writer

A WAC sergeant, who worked at Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters in North Africa and was usually too tired to find the shelter during air raids, said yesterday, "the experiences were wonderful, but one appreciates the little things here so much after being away nearly a year."

Technician Fourth Grade Margaret M. Hartnett, a pretty, blue-eyed daughter of a Washington colonel, is just back from North Africa to attend an Officer Candidate School at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

The WAC, who marched in review before Generals Henri Giraud and Eisenhower, saw the captured German Gen. Jurgen von Arnim and danced in the street when Yank soldiers returned from the Tunisian front, said she rushed for the first soft-drink machine she could find upon her arrival in this country. It was empty, but she found another one right away.

When Sergeant Hartnett returned home at 401 Wilson Lane, Bethesda, she surprised her parents who thought she was in North Africa. She is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. E. H. Hartnett. Her father is a retired Army officer.

In an interview yesterday at WAC recruiting headquarters, Sergeant Hartnett reported: "There are no wall flowers among the WACS in North Africa. When we celebrated the return of our boys from Tunisia, each girl danced about 2 steps before some one broke."

She added, however, WACS work so hard there isn't much time for play. After her arrival there in January, she was on the job 15 hours a day for a time on a 7-day-a-week schedule. But when fighting ended in North Africa, the WACS were given a day off and dictation at night became lighter.

Among her other reminiscences were Antoine, the French refugee who gave the WACS chic coiffures; veiled native women whose eyes lighted in interest and envy as the trimly uniformed WACS stepped down the street; the Catholic convent out from the city, where they were quartered upon arrival; the scramble for bath water, and the martial wedding of Sergt. Ann Bradley, the WAC "poster girl" to a handsome lieutenant.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, Oct. 5.—If you are rooting for the Cardinals in this World Series, take heart despite that 4-2 beating by the Yankees in today's opening game, because the Cardinals were more chagrined than shamed. They can still be very tough.

POVICH

Spud Chandler has now beaten the Cardinals and is available for two more starts against them in the series if necessary, but paradoxically the specter of Chandler as a decisive series factor may not be haunting the Cardinals as completely as before the series started.

Max Lanier was in there outpitching Chandler for most of the game today and in him the Cardinals seem to have a guy who can combat the Yankee ace with a reasonable expectancy of success. Lanier can be pitted against Chandler two more times in the series and Chandler will be no heavy favorite in either game.

At this point in this series the Cardinals are looking a lot better than they did after losing the opening game last year just before, you remember, they mopped the Yankees up in the next four straight. They didn't get a hit off Red Ruffing in last year's series opener until two were out in the eighth, it will be recalled. In defeat today they were always threatening.

Chandler held them to seven hits, but the Cardinals were clouting the ball right smartly nevertheless. And Lanier was giving the Yankees trouble with his fast ball. He struck out 7 in 7 innings and Manager Billy Southworth will have no qualms about starting him back against Chandler.

The Cardinals didn't run today. It was the Yankees who stole a base, advanced on wild throws and otherwise were having fun on the bases, but these Cardinals can run. They need only an opening. In the main they're the same guys who ran the Yanks dizzy last year. This is no time to quit on 'em.

Today's first game witnessed a strange transposition of the goat hero and the series hero of last year—Joe Gordon and Walker Cooper. It was Gordon, you remember, who could do nothing right in the 1942 series—made only two hits in the five games, was picked off second base by Cooper for the final out of the fifth and decisive game. And it was Cooper whose hitting and throwing, you remember, was the dominant series factor.

Well, today, they exchanged places with Cooper's malfeasance, the turning point of the Cards' defeat, and Gordon sharing with Chandler the accolades for the Yankees' triumph. For Gordon it must have been sweet.

The Yankee second baseman was poison to the Cardinals all afternoon. He ranged far and wide around second base, throwing out eight runners and taking three throws for putouts. If Sanders hadn't beaten Gordon's throw to first by a half step in the fifth inning, it would have been the play of the game, because Gordon had made an incredible stop of the ball.

His home run in the fourth inning must have been the nicest hit Gordon ever made, because there was the memory of last year and the Cardinals' dismissal of him as a soft-touch guy in the Yankee lineup. Gordon was serving notice on the Cards that the Yankees still hit home runs.

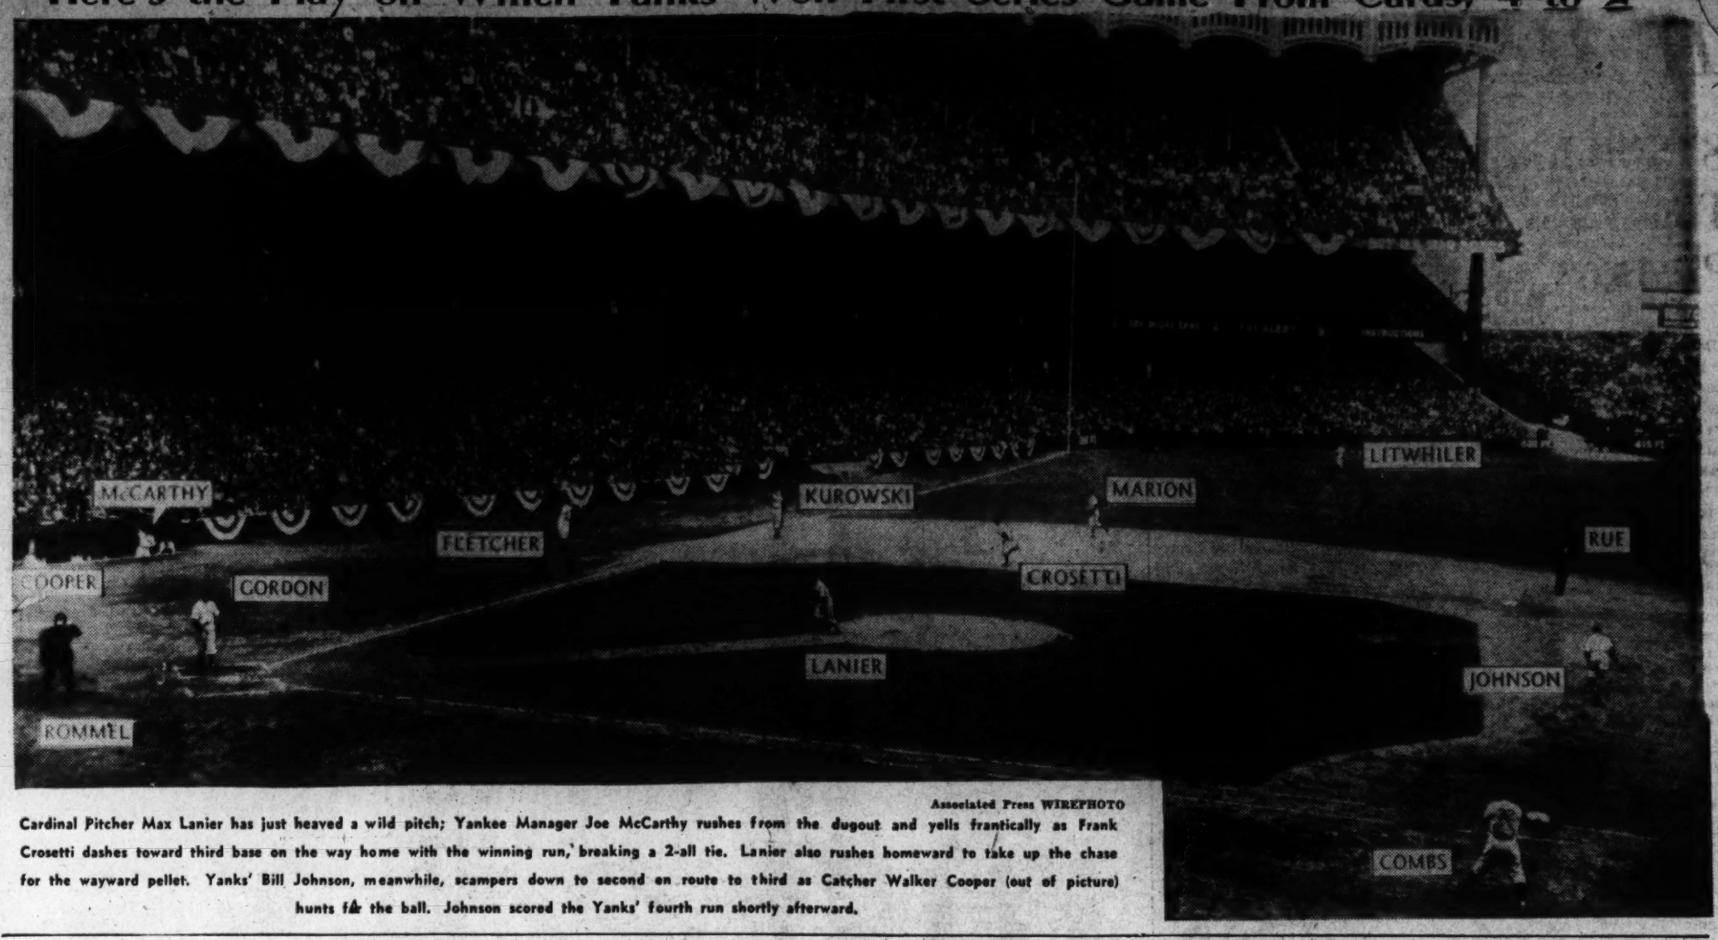
Cooper looked like anything but a great catcher today, although that ranking has been his for the past two seasons. He could have thrown Crosetti out on the latter's steal of second in the sixth inning but his heave was beyond step-ladder range of Second Baseman Lou Klein and only the nimble thinking of Shortstop Marion, who sprawled himself over the prostrate Crosetti prevented the runner from taking an extra base.

And that little interlude in the sixth inning during which Cooper wandered aimlessly around the plate while Lanier's wild pitch lay loose behind him and Yankee runners scurrying around the bases was reminiscent of another sorry episode by another catcher. It almost takes rank with big Ernie Lombardi's snooze at home plate in the 1939 series when Charley Keller of the Yankees scored the run that beat the Reds because Lombardi couldn't be bothered to pick up the ball and tag him out.

Aside from Chandler and Gordon the Yankees looked like no world beaters today. Crosetti messed up an easy grounder that might have caused trouble in the sixth, and Etten's lapse in the fifth was something out of this world. The big first baseman who graduated from the Phillies apparently hasn't overcome all their habits. For no reason at all he threw a ball to the unsuspecting Dickey while Sanders, who was on first, scampered to second.

Chandler stopped the Cardinals by stopping the top five men in their batting order. That group Klein, Walker, Musial, Walker Cooper and Whitey Kurowski, who are supposed to represent the Cardinal power, totaled exactly one hit off Chandler, and that an infield hit, through the first seven innings. It's up to the Cardinals to bounce back. That always has been one of their habits.

Here's the Play on Which Yanks Won First Series Game From Cards, 4 to 2



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Cardinal Pitcher Max Lanier has just heaved a wild pitch; Yankee Manager Joe McCarthy rushes from the dugout and yells frantically as Frank Crosetti dashes toward third base on the way home with the winning run, breaking a 2-all tie. Lanier also rushes homeward to take up the chase for the wayward pellet. Yanks' Bill Johnson, meanwhile, scampers down to second on route to third as Catcher Walker Cooper (out of picture) hunts for the ball. Johnson scored the Yanks' fourth run shortly afterward.

he failed even to remove his mask. The ball lay loose and free near the backstop as Crosetti and Johnson scurried around the bases.

It was Lanier himself who finally raced in from the mound to pick the ball up after noting Cooper's helplessness. Cooper could have held the runners to a one-base advance. As it was Crosetti scored easily from second with the winning run and Johnson legged it from first to third.

Chandler, the 34-year-old right-hander from Georgia, was recording his first World Series triumph with a clever seven-hit pitching job against the Cardinals while the Yankees were getting eight hits off Lanier and Harry Brecheen.

Odds Now 5-2 on Yanks

Chandler's victory puts a new face on the series picture, with the odds now zooming to 5 to 2 that the Yankees will win the series. Cardinal supporters now are haunted by the specter of three starts by Chandler in the series, if necessary.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees announced that Ernie Bonham would be his pitching choice for tomorrow's second game. Manager Billy Southworth indicated that his selection would be his 21-game winner, Morton Cooper, in the face of Cooper's ineffectiveness against the Yanks last year and his recent complaints of a sore arm.

Yankee Stadium today, with every seat sold, presented a huge panorama of America at play, but the game was not without its grim reminder that America is at war. Throughout the late innings giant four-motored Flying Fortresses zoomed back and forth across the stadium skies, after dipping low with their motors wide open and sweeping the sunlit field with big exciting shadows of their might.

Nearly Stole Show

Eyes were turned skyward as the shuttling Fortresses stole the show at frequent intervals, eclipsing the ball game, and twice the umpires called time in deference to the goings-on in the air.

Except for Chandler's pitching it was a sloppily played ball game with the left-handed Lanier the victim of two unearned Yankee runs in addition to the havoc caused by his sixth inning wild pitch. Four balls were booted by the infielders and both clubs were guilty of lapses unbecoming World Series teams.

For Joe Gordon, though, it was a great afternoon that helped to erase the memory of his dismal performance against the Cardinals last year when he made only two hits in the entire series. Because today Gordon caught a fast ball with his bat in the fourth inning and lashed it far into the left-field stands for a home run that lifted the Yankees into a 2-to-1 lead at that point in the fourth inning.

Chandler was mesmerizing the Cardinals with the same assortment of stuff that labeled him the American League's leading pitcher this season—fast balls and slow curves to the left-handers and screw balls to the right-handed hitters. He walked one batter.

Lanier Pitching Well

But until the Yankees broke the 2-2 tie with two runs in the sixth, little Lanier was outpitching Chandler. He had allowed only three hits to that point and sprinkled the Yankees with seven strikeouts in the seven innings he worked before there was need of a pinch-hitter. Lanier was throwing his fast ball past the Yankees. Until Gordon hit his fourth inning homer the Yankees got only one ball out of the infield.

It was the Cardinals who were off in front with Martin Marion wrenching a second-inning run out of Chandler after Walker Cooper slashed a high-hopping single off Johnson's glove to lead off. Cooper was on second with two out when after Litwhiler walked, Marion banged a two bagger off Etten's glove into right field. Cooper scored easily but when Litwhiler was waved home also after rounding third, Rightfielder Tuck Stainback threw him out by, conservatively, 20 feet.

Chandler's single with two out in the third inning was the only hit off Lanier until the fourth when the Yankees came up with two unearned runs, with Lanier's help.

Card Defense Wide Open

The Cardinals' defense cracked wide open—on three consecutive plays. Crosetti grounded to second baseman Lou Klein and was safe when Lanier dropped the throw to first after covering the bag. It was an error for Lanier and the start of the deluge.

The Cardinals' next offender was Walker Cooper, supposedly a great throwing catcher. With Crosetti setting out on a steal of second, Cooper threw the ball 15 feet over Klein's head, and only Shortstop Marion's clever maneuver of draping himself over Crosetti as the latter slid into second prevented Crosetti from reaching third on the throw.

Johnson laid a bunt down the first base line, and with First Baseman Sanders fielding the ball it ended up as a hit, due to the failure of either Klein or Lanier to cover first base on the play. Crosetti reached third. Keller hit into a double play but Crosetti scored with the run that made it 1-1.

And then along came Gordon to tie into a fast ball for his homer into the left field seats and move the Yanks in front 2-1. Left fielder Danny Litwhiler, watched with his hands on his hips as the ball sailed far over his head into the stands.

Tanier Tied It Up in Fifth

Lanier, a gamester, tied the game up himself in the fifth inning after Sanders beat out a hit to Joe Gordon. It was a gift run by the Yankees. First Baseman Nick Etten pulled what might have been the series boner on the play. Assuming that Sanders was out on Gordon's throw to first, Etten recklessly made a perfunctory throw to the plate. Bill Dickey was looking for no such throw and the ball sailed over his head, as Sanders went down to second base.

Litwhiler moved the run to third with a long fly that sent Lindell deep in right center, but Sanders languished there while Marion rolled to Gordon for the second out. Lanier got him home, however, with a Texas League single to center.

Came the Yankees' sixth and Lanier got precious little help from Third Baseman Whitey Kurowski. The pesky Crosetti started it off with a line drive to Kurowski who dropped the ball, not a hard catch. It was scored as a hit. Bill Johnson moved Crosetti to second with a single to center and Lanier was in deep trouble.

Yanks Scorn Sacrifice

The Yankees scorned a sacrifice by Keller who flied out harmlessly to right field, and then it happened—that wild pitch we were telling you about. Crosetti scored, Johnson raced to third and Dickey dropped a looping single over Klein's head to score Johnson.

That was the ball game. The Cardinals got the tying runs on base with two out in the eighth when Klein and Stan Musial singled, but Chandler took care that nobody else hit the ball out of the infield.

Center Fielder Harry Walker deprived the Yankees of at least one run in the seventh with the fielding play of the game. He drifted far back when Chandler powered a long drive into left center and made a breath-taking one-hand catch of the swat despite Left Fielder Litwhiler who was running interference for the ball. Walker held the ball even while taking two complete somersaults.

Notre Dame, Michigan Tops in Poll

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 5.—One hundred and eight of the country's football experts apparently agree with Coach Howie Odell of Yale that the war has divided all teams into two leagues—those that are good and those that are not.

The experts, voting in the first of the Associated Press' weekly polls to determine the Nation's ranking teams, definitely agreed that Notre Dame and Michigan deserved the one-two spots.

The two attracte 89 of the first-place votes, while the remaining 33 teams to receive their consideration drew only 19 firsts.

Army, Navy, Duke, Penn, Purdue, Iowa Preflight, Minnesota and Southern California completed the first 10 in that order.

All of the schools to make the select circle are "Navy" schools except for the two service elevens and Iowa Preflight which, however, also are manned by service personnel. Ohio State, last year's No. 1 team and an all-civilian outfit this year, dropped to eighteenth place in the first 1943 vote.

The leading elevens with total points (first place votes in parenthesis):

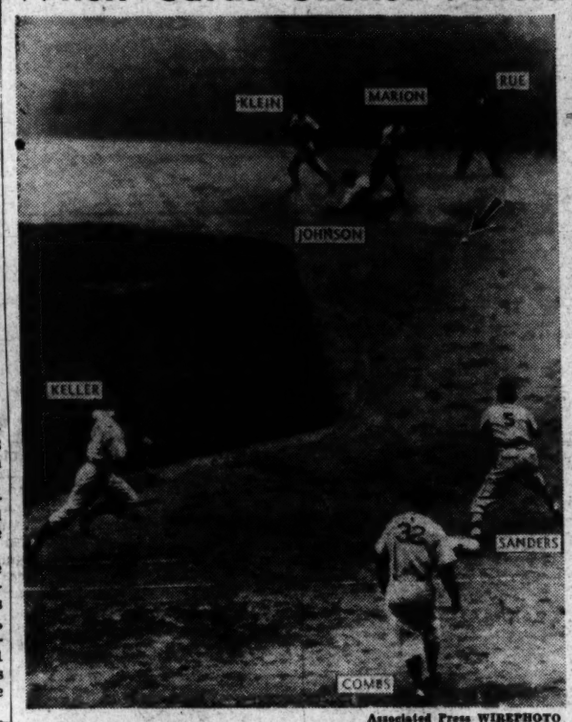
Nosey Fortress Pilot of Series Opener Sought

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 5.—The First Air Force announced tonight that an effort is being made to establish the identity of the pilot who flew a Flying Fortress at low altitude over the Yankee Stadium during the World Series opener today.

Low level flying over crowds in areas of congested population, the First Air Force said, is basis for disciplinary action under Army regulations. Thus far the investigation indicates that the plane was not one based in the New York vicinity. Results of the investigation will be submitted to the Army Air Forces in Washington for proper action.

When Cards Clicked Afield



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

St. Louis erred at important moments yesterday but not this time—it was a double play—Klein to Marion to Sanders with Yankee Bill Johnson out at second and Yankee Charley Keller the victim at first.

Play-by-Play Description Of World Series Opener

FIRST INNING

CARDINALS—With the count two strikes and one ball, Klein lifted a lazy fly to Lindell in center field. After looking at one ball and one strike, Walker drove Stainback back almost to the right field wall with a long fly. Musial picked out a three and one pitch and lined to Lindell in left center.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES—With the count two strikes and one ball, Stainback lined to Kurowski. With a one and one count, Crosetti rolled to Marion and was thrown out. Johnson was called out on strikes.

SECOND INNING

CARDINALS—On the first pitch, W. Cooper bounced a single off Johnson's glove. Kurowski laid down a perfect bunt to sacrifice Cooper to second. Chandler to Gordon, who covered first. Sanders struck out on three pitches. Litwhiler walked on five pitches. With the count one and one Marion sliced a double over Etten's outstretched glove, scoring W. Cooper, but Litwhiler was thrown out at the plate, Stainback to Dickey.

One run, two hits, no errors, one left.

YANKEES—After working the count to three and one, Keller lifted a high foul into the stands causing the crowds to roar, but then he was called out on strikes. Gordon looked at one ball and bounced to Lanier who threw him out. With the count two and two, Dickey grounded to Kurowski and was thrown out.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

THIRD INNING

CARDINALS—Lanier was greeted by a cheer on his first appearance at bat, but grounded to Gordon who threw him out. Klein was thrown out by Gordon. Walker took a strike and then flied deep to Stainback.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES—Etten looked at one ball and then grounded out to Marion. Lindell struck out, but had to be thrown out, W. Cooper to Sanders. Chandler picked out the first pitch and drove a clean single to left for the first hit off Lanier. Stainback struck out.

FOURTH INNING

CARDINALS—Musial rolled to Gordon and was thrown out. W. Cooper bounced to Crosetti and was tossed out. Gordon came over behind second base to take Kurowski's hot grounder and threw him out on a good play.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES—Crosetti rapped a roller which Klein took near first base and threw to Lanier in time for a putout, but Crosetti ran into Lanier on the bar and the pitcher dropped the ball. Crosetti was safe and Lanier charged with an error. Klein received an assist. On the first pitch Crosetti stole second as W. Cooper made a high, rain throw. Johnson bunted safely, sending Crosetti to third, as Sanders fielded the ball and was unable to tag Johnson or beat him to the bag. With the count one and one, Keller grounded into a fast double play, Klein to Marion to Sanders, Crosetti crossing the plate to tie the score. With the count three balls and one strike, Gordon slammed a home run into the lower left field stands, 400 feet from the plate. Dickey popped to Marion.

FIFTH INNING

CARDINALS—Gordon ran over back of second to make a great stop of Sanders' grounder but his throw was too late to catch the runner and it was a hit. Etten, in indignation, over the decision at first, threw the ball to the ground toward home plate and as it rolled almost to the Yankee dugout Sanders raced to second. It was an error for Etten. Litwhiler flied deep to Lindell and Sanders went to third after the catch. Marion bounced to Gordon and was thrown out while Sanders was held on third. After taking two strikes, Lanier looped a single into short center scoring Sanders with the tying run. Klein forced Lanier at second, Johnson to Gordon.

One run, two hits, one error, one left.

YANKEES—The Cardinals' run in the top half of the fifth was unearned. Etten reached first safely when his grounder to Klein took a bad bounce and hit him in the chest, dropping dead at the second baseman's feet. He was unable to locate the ball and was charged with an error. Lindell fanned. Chandler also struck out. Stainback raised a high fly to Litwhiler.

SIXTH INNING

CARDINALS—Walker struck out. Musial bounded to Gordon and was thrown out. W. Cooper sent an easy roller to Crosetti, who fumbled the ball in the dirt until it was too late to make a throw and W. Cooper was safe on the error. Kurowski was thrown out by Gordon.

YANKEES—Kurowski jumped high into the air to knock down Crosetti's liner but his throw to first came on the bounce and Crosetti beat it out for a single. Johnson singled over Lanier's head and into center field. Crosetti stopping at second. With the count one and one, Keller filed high to Musial and the runners were held on their bags. After shoving two strikes past Gordon, Lanier made a wild pitch, and when Catcher Cooper was unable to find the ball, Crosetti scored all the way from second and Johnson reached third. Gordon then struck out. Dickey lofted a single just out of Klein's reach in right center scoring Johnson. Etten lined to Litwhiler in short left.

SEVENTH INNING

CARDINALS—With the count one and one, Sanders smacked a sharp single to right. After waiting out a full count, Litwhiler lifted a fly which Crosetti took in short center. Marion shot a liner which did not appear to be more than a yard foul into the left field stands, but then grounded into a fast double play, Gordon to Crosetti to Etten.

YANKEES—After looking at one ball, Lindell lifted a high fly to Walker in left center. Walker ran very deep into left center and made a one-handed tumbling catch of Chandler's long fly. Stainback lined a single to left. Crosetti popped to Sanders in back of first.

CARDINALS—Debs Garms, a left-handed hitter batted for Lanier. Garms struck out. Klein looped a single into short right center, the ball falling safely between Gordon and two Yankee outfielders. No runs, two hits, no errors, two left.

YANKEES—Harry Brecheen, a rookie left-hander with a record of 9 and 6, went to the mound for the Cardinals. Johnson bounced to Brecheen and was thrown out. Keller lined a single into the right field corner. Gordon walked. Dickey struck out. Litwhiler came in on a dead run to catch Etten's shallow liner.

No runs, one hit, no errors, two left.

NINTH INNING

CARDINALS—Crosetti threw out Kurowski. Sanders lined to Crosetti. Chandler threw out Litwhiler.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Tainted Runs Make Opener Series Oddity

By Judson Bailey

Associated Press Sports Writer

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 5.—For the second game of the series to be played here tomorrow, Manager Joe McCarthy nominated Ernie (Jumbo) Bonham, big right-hander, who has won 15 and lost 8, while Manager Billy Southworth said he would use Mort Cooper or Alpha Brazle, the latter a rookie southpaw, who came up in mid-July from Sacramento in the Pacific Coast League.

Cooper, who started twice in the last World Series and was hammered hard both times, has won 21 and lost 8 this year, while Brazle's record is 8 and 2.

Today's battle was one of the oddest and most obstreperous games in the history of the World Series. The New York Yankees conquered the St. Louis Cardinals, 4 to 2, in an exchange of tainted runs.

It was a triumph for the pitching prowess of Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler, the 34-year-old Georgia right-hander, and a spectacular comeback for Second Baseman Joe Gordon, the goat of last year's series, but mostly it was a befuddled exhibition of baseball.

Chandler, who had lost two World Series games and never pitched a complete one in his previous chances with the Yankees, lived up to his reputation as the outstanding hurler of the present major league season by holding the Cardinals to seven hits and bearing down in the clutches.

Gordon hit a ringing home run in the fourth inning and gave a miraculous defensive performance during which he made eight assists to tie a World Series record for second basemen and handled 12 fielding chances, just 1 short of the record for total chances.

Their double-barreled heroics gave the fans something good to

U. S. Soldiers in British Isles Crowd Radios to Hear Series

By Bob Considine

International News Service Staff Writer

London, Oct. 5.—Thousands of American soldiers and officers trudged through the impenetrable British blackout tonight to Red Cross and USO service clubs to listen to a static-filled radio account of today's 4 to 2 victory of the Yankees over the Cardinals in the first World Series game.

By and large, the American boys in the European theater of operations are Cardinal fans. They have stoically maintained that Billy Southworth's team will win the series.

CONSIDINE

But the announcement of the victory of Joe McCarthy's team in the series' opener was received with delight — the typical American delight that greets the triumph of any underdog.

The Yankees, you may be surprised to learn, are considered the underdogs in London.

American boys crowded around spluttering English radios all the way from debris-filled Plymouth to the United States Navy's bleak quonset huts at Londonderry hailed the return to form of Joe Gordon with grunts of satisfaction.

They Liked Crosetti

The performance of the veteran Frankie Crosetti also met with approval. The "I-told-you-so's" filled thousands of carefully blacked out radio rooms.

Don Dumphy's concise condensation of the dramatics of the first game was greeted with whoops and whistles, especially his account of Gordon's 420-foot home run, the steady pitching of Spud Chandler and Max Lanier's wild pitch which ricocheted off home plate.

At a Midlands American Flying Fortress station, much sympathy was extended to Capt. Billy Southworth, pilot son of the St. Louis Cardinals' manager and holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross. Southworth, like his father and Cardinal rooters everywhere, said the loss of the

18 Horses May Start in Capitol Handicap on Saturday

$7500 Race Tops First Pimlico Card

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 5.—As many as 18 horses appeared today to be likely starters in the $7500 Added Capitol Handicap which will feature the opening day of the four Maryland tracks' consolidated meeting at Pimlico on Saturday.

The top-weighted thoroughbred of the 35 eligibles—Belair Stud's Apache—was not expected to be shipped from New York in time for the 6-furlong Copitol, but Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan said that the six horses next on his list of weights could be regarded as possible starters.

Likely public choice of the opening day crowd, in the event Apache does not face the barrier, was Howe Stable's Cassis, which has been assigned 125 pounds, just one under Apache.

Cassis is regarded as a likely starter, as are Woodford Farm's Signator and T. D. Grimes' With regards, both assigned 124 pounds; Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Cherrydale, 116; Calumet Farm's Quien Es, 116, and M. Wexler's Rest Reward 115.

Others which McLennan listed as possible starters were Cape Cod, Defense, Pompion, First Of All, New Moon, Challamore, Adulator, Makeshift, Tellmenow, Sollure, Sassy Lady and High Command.

The Capitol will be the first of 29 stake races to be offered at Pimlico during the joint meeting to be conducted by Pimlico, Laurel Park, Bowie and Havre de Grace.

Syracuse Wins In Little Series

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct 5 (AP).—Syracuse (II), after losing two straight, crashed back into the running of the Little World Series tonight, defeating Columbus (AA) 5-1. The chiefs strafed two Red Bird hurlers for nine hits while Lefty Arnold Carter was giving up five before a crowd of 4057.

The chiefs put the game away early, shelling Ken Bukhart from the mound in the first inning with a six-hit attack that produced four runs. They added another in the third off Relief Hurler Francis Red Barrett, who handcuffed Syracuse from there on in.

Carter, the first southpaw the chiefs have sent against Columbus, yielded a run in the second inning when the Birds bunched a couple of singles, but had everything under control the rest of the way, striking out five.

first game was "just one of those things." He predicted the Cards will finish off the series as they did last year when they put the Yanks to rout by winning four straight games after losing the opener.

Britons Bewildered

British interest in baseball has quickened perceptibly since the Yankee occupation of the United Kingdom. More Britons than ever before listened to the start of this series—with consequent widespread bewilderment.

The nuances of Dumphy's broadcast, so heartily appreciated by baseball-starved Americans, went as high over the heads of the majority of English listeners as do the planes of the RAF en route to a night raid on the Reich.

A typical English reaction was given me in London by George Binger, a rugby and cricket fan, who was just as mystified by the art of baseball after hearing the broadcast as he was before.

Binger said:

"It seems like our old-fashioned game of rounders but from the yelling of the crowds I would say this must be the roughhouse version. It was a good idea for the BBC to entertain American troops over here but I am afraid many English listeners switched to another program or shut off their radios. Like rugby, the game evidently has to be seen before you can get excited about it."

McNair Released By Indianapolis

Indianapolis, Oct. 4 (AP).—Eric McNair, veteran major league infielder who made a futile comeback attempt with the Indianapolis Indians of the American Association this season, was given an outright release today by the Indianapolis club.

McNair was handicapped earlier in the season by a lame wrist and later by an injured ankle. He was signed last spring as a free agent.

Bonham Faces Brazle or Cooper Today

remember, but the recollections most spectators probably carried from the big ball park were of the incredible miscues which went into their record books as four errors and the one which didn't, but which lost the ball game for the cardinals.

For five innings Max Lanier, the chunky southpaw, ably matched Chandler's curving efforts, but in the sixth he made a wild pitch that allowed Frank Crosetti to score all the way from second and put Bill Johnson on third base with what proved to be New York's final run.

Lanier and Crosetti and a confusing jumble of bad plays also had been involved in the Yankees' first run in the fourth frame. Crosetti, leading off, hit a grounder which Lou Klein fielded well and threw to Lanier for what should have been a putout. However, Lanier stepped on first base with the ball and Crosetti crashed into him at full speed, causing the pitcher to drop the ball for an error.

Crosetti Steals

On the next pitch Crosetti stole second with the help of a high wild throw by Walker Cooper which sailed into center field. He moved to third when Johnson beat out a bunt down the first base line and scored as Charley Keller hit into a double play.

Gordon followed with his homer, picking out the "cripple," an easy pitch by Lanier with the count three balls and one strike.

The sixth inning opened with Crosetti again reaching first on a close play. Third Baseman George Kurowski of the Cards had jumped high in the air to knock down his line drive, but was off balance on the throw, which came to Ray Sanders on a bounce just as Crosetti crossed the bag. Johnson put him on second with a single to center and Keller flied out.

Lanier worked carefully on Gordon this time, getting two strikes past him, but then the left-hander uncorked a wild pitch that caromed past Cooper. The ball rolled toward the St. Louis dugout and the catcher went hunting it in the direction of the Yankees' bench.

Lanier Retrieves Ball

While this hysterical act was in progress, and Lanier came racing in from the mound to retrieve the ball, Crosetti scampered home from second and Johnson went from first to third.

Lanier finished fanning Gordon, and then Bill Dickey, the old warhorse of the Yanks, boosted a single just out of Klein's reach in right center for another run.

Lanier, after giving seven hits and striking out seven, subsequently was removod for a pinch batter in the eighth and Harry Brecheen, also a southpaw, completed the pitching chore allowing the Yankees one hit in the inning he worked.

Babe Sharkey And Luttrell Clash Tonight

Cowboy Luttrell, the rip-roaring Texan, and Babe Sharkey, the Man Mountain, also from the Lone Star State, who slugged it out in a brawl a few weeks ago, will return tonight to Turner's Arena for a repeat performance.

They are slated for a one-fall-to-a-finish that promises to exceed their last battle in slugging.

The semiwindup involves a newcomer, Dapper Dizz, from the Pacific Coast, and Michele Leone, the Boston Villain. The Dizz is said to be quite a man, and promises to develop into a headliner here.

The Blue Streak, hooded grappler, will meet Ed (Strangler) White, former pro footballer, in a special 30-minute match.

Maurice LaChappelle, the French master, and Johnny Long, Baltimore shipyard worker, will clash in a 30-minute bout, while Dr. John Bonika, the Boston medico, and John Melas, the Florida Greek, will complete the card.

Rotary Golfers Beat Kiwanis

Eugene Gott, with a gross 77 and L. E. Hutchison, scoring a net 79, led the Rotary Club golfers to a 24½ to 21½ victory over their arch rivals, the Kiwanis Club linksmen in their annual team match yesterday at Manor Country Club. Sixty-one players competed.

Gott scored a 38-39, 77, while teammate T. N. Beavers had 37-41, 78. Lowest gross scores of the losers were Pete Pardoe, 38-39, 77, and Marty Wiegand, 39-40, 79.

Hutchison's 85-16, 79, was the lowest gross score of the day while Dan Holland of Rotary had 89-17, 72. F. T. Mitchell had 88-18, 70, and Bill Davis 88-16, 72 to lead Kiwanis net totals.

Blind bogey winners were Tom Butts, Rotary, and J. D. Weimer, Kiwanis, with 82s while most sixes awards went to M. E. Horton and Mark Lansburgh with 8 and 7, respectively, and J. T. Groom had high score on the fourth hole for Rotary, 10, with R. P. Giffey's 11 high for the opposition.

Navy's Grid Squad In Scrimmages

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 5 (AP).—The Navy football squad paraded through heavy scrimmages today with the accent on pass defense, as the Middies adjusted their sights for the gridiron clash with the rugged eleven from Duke University on Saturday.

Tar Coach John E. Whelchel gave the spotlight to the third and and fourth team backs—especially Bob Jenkins who starred for the Navy pigskinners against Cornell last week in Baltimore stadium.

Jenkins, 190-pound, fast running back, was a freshman star on Alabama's Crimson Tide last year.

Billy Evans Voted 5-Year Contract

New York, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Southern Association, meeting before today's first World Series game, presented President Billy Evans with a 5-year contract with a sliding salary scale based on attendance.

Since being named head of the league last winter Evans had served without a contract. The league announced that the vote on the contract was unanimous.

Other plans for the 1944 season in the Southern, continuance of the split season, increasing the size of rosters and raising the club salary limits, were approved at a meeting of the club owners. The meeting took place Sunday.

Buck Henry, Coolidge End, Suffers Broken Collarbone

Coolidge High's winning combination in the public high school championship series was broken up yesterday when Charles (Buck) Henry, towering left end of the Colts, suffered a broken collar bone in an intrasquad scrimmage. Henry, 6-foot 2-inch youngster and a pitcher on Coolidge's nine last spring, took over the Coolidge punting on short notice in the Colts' opening game and averaged 40 yards to become an important factor in the victory over Woodrow Wilson. He played a good defensive game against Tech last week. It is possible that Henry will miss only two series games. Coolidge has dates this Friday and on October 29. Should he return in a month he would be absent from only the Eastern and Western games.

Coach Gilbert Conn is likely to move Chick Lang, an Ohio boy with high school football experience, to Henry's end. Lang made a strong tackle that forced a fumble leading to Coolidge's first touchdown in its victory over Tech.

Danny Petro Hanbury Meet Here Oct. 13

INVASION!

ON WINGS BUILT BY PULLMAN-STANDARD

A silent, deadly rain of destruction for tyranny drifts down out of the skies from huge transport planes—Douglas C47's, the same tough, dependable "work horses" of the Army Air Forces that wing their way over Africa, Sicily, and the Pacific islands bringing guns, ammunition and medical supplies to the fighting fronts and flying out the wounded.

"GIVE us plant capacity—quick! Give us men with 'know-how', men whose experience and resourcefulness fit them to tackle anything! We need them NOW!"

This was the call of America's aircraft builders, spurred by war's desperate haste. They needed help—and got it; found the plant, the management, and men—at Pullman-Standard. Here was experience in working and fabricating aluminum—Pullman-Standard had handled many millions of pounds of aluminum, probably more than any other single fabricator outside of the aircraft industry. For years, in building streamlined trains, Pullman-Standard had been a laboratory for developing and testing alloys and fabricating methods—and so these plane builders came to "headquarters" for the help they sought!

It was no accident that made Pullman-Standard specialists in wings for the Douglas C47's—the Skytrain—and when Douglas planned the mighty C54, the largest cargo plane in full-scale production, Pullman-Standard's past record made it the logical choice for more work—wings and tail assemblies. For Pullman-Standard's development of streamliners was ideal training for builders of aircraft assemblies. To these pioneer car manufacturers, who built the first lightweight streamlined train in America, the fabrication of compound curves of aircraft was indeed no problem.

And who is turning out these great wing assemblies? Thousands of keen, eager workers! 40% of them are women. Some of the workers are old-timers back in harness from the retired list. All new employes are trained in vocational classes that never stop—tough courses in riveting, shaping, assembling, supervising, inspecting. Here, truly, is a well-disciplined, hard-hitting team that wants Victory—and wants it quickly!

Absenteeism? They have made a record as low as 1.72% at a time when the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics showed a figure of 7.2% for the combined air-frame industries for the same period.

Short cuts, better methods?—plenty of them; some received via the Suggestion Plan which for 20 years has been a vital institution in all the Company's plants. One ingenious suggestion on wing-tip fabrication made it possible to do in a single operation what had always before required seven separate operations.

Safety? An excellent record. The first seven months of 1943 showed only 3.24 accidents per million man-hours.

And so it is that Pullman-Standard is turning out aircraft assemblies on time—often ahead of schedule; and saving countless dollars for American taxpayers—proof that the democratic incentive plan pays rich dividends in increased production and conservation of man power.

And what of the future?

Versatility, teamwork between workers and management, the initiative and resourcefulness that enabled Pullman-Standard to become shipbuilders, makers of tanks and howitzer carriages, bombs and shells, trench mortars and aircraft major sub-assemblies—these are solid assurance that the future is in capable hands; for out of war's gruesome business will come many contributions to human happiness and comfort. Today the all-compelling goal is Victory—that purpose which makes all else unimportant.

With our skills trained and sharpened; with engineering and scientific improvements and new discoveries in metallurgy; with more efficient manufacturing methods—all stemming from the great laboratory of war production—we shall give to the world better facilities for railroad transportation. America will ride in even greater comfort, and ship its goods in cars lighter in weight, cars that save operating costs for the railroads and amply satisfy all rigid standards of safety. This is but one of Pullman-Standard's post-war promises to America.

Manpower Conference Called Here

Top Regional Officials' Talks Seen Clinching Labor Controls

By Kurt Kelman
Post Staff Writer

A two-day conference of regional top officials of the War Manpower Commission, starting here today, is expected to put the finishing touches on a labor stabilization program designed to streamline and strongly enforce manpower controls going into effect October 15.

Features of the new plans, which are understood to be considered by WMC officials as the only means of avoiding a national service act, are admittedly more stringent than any labor control measures taken at present, and include:

1. Extension of the waiting period for workers who have failed to secure a statement of availability from 30 to 60 days to get a new job.

2. Channeling of all hiring in critical occupations, and in an increasing number of locally needed occupations through the local offices of the United States Employment Service.

3. Direction of available manpower to industries paying better than "substandard" wages. Based on the assumption that all "essential" industries are already paying more than 40 cents an hour minimum, the WMC will issue statements of availability to all workers receiving less than this minimum, established nationally by the War Labor Board.

Through the extension of the waiting period for workers changing from one job to another and through intensified hiring by the USES, the main purposes of the stabilization plan are hoped to be achieved, namely, curtailment of the labor turnover and control of migration.

Not part of the stabilization plans, but considered as important features of an over-all manpower program are designs for a more stringent enforcement of the 48-hour week in all critical areas and better utilization of labor.

WMC officials pointed out yesterday that the extension of the longer wartime week to all industries in critical areas would release labor to needed occupations, and thus relieve the entire labor situation.

It also was indicated that surveys on full labor utilization in industrial plants of this region are under way and may be extended.

Today's meeting between Henry E. Treide, WMC director of region IV, and regional officials, coming from the District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, and North Carolina, will deal mostly with training programs, it was said, while tomorrow's sessions will concentrate on the actual stabilization plans.

S. E. Schools Overcrowded, Council Hears

Overcrowding in Southeast schools, despite opening of new ones this year, was reported at the Southeast Council meeting last night.

It also was revealed that WPB had informed the Board of Education no priorities could be granted for erecting additions unless overcrowding exceeded capacity by 100 per cent.

Davis School in Bradbury Heights now has 237 students in a building built for 200, and at the Patterson School, opened this year, it was said 467 were attending in three-hour shifts although the building was supposed to accomodate only between 250 and 300.

The council heard also a plea against removing pin oaks along Pennsylvania ave. se. by Mrs. Leila W. Marshall, president of Summit Park Citizens Association. She said air passengers from Bolling Field use and see the avenue as well as residents of Southeast Washington.

Samples of allegedly contaminated water taken from spigots in the area were exhibited as evidence that a new reservoir is needed.

A resolution to recommend elevation of Lieut. John W. McGuiness of No. 11 Precinct to a captaincy was approved, and officers of the council were reelected by a unanimous ballot: W. J. Smith, Summit Park, president; L. R. Fletcher, Congress Heights, vice president; Mrs. C. G. Smith, Anacostia, second vice president; Mrs. C. H. Hagerty, Washington Highlands, secretary; and C. A. Barker, Randall Highlands, treasurer.

Cheese, Cream Deliveries To Be Reduced

Cream and cottage cheese deliveries and quantities were cut an undetermined amount yesterday with no guarantee any would be delivered at all, local dairymen and Agricultural Department officials said last night, coincident with their denials the plan affected the milk situation.

Milk and cream companies, in a leaflet being left at consumer homes, said that the War Food Administration has limited the distribution of cream to a minimum not specified. The companies announce the situation is one over which they have no control and that they will fill cream orders "as nearly as possible but many will not always get it."

The firms announce that "no new orders and no extra orders" will be filled and that families ordering cream, that have never done so here, will not be supplied, even though they are new residents of the city.

Cottage cheese is restricted to a ¾-pound package on Monday and Tuesday for home delivery, the same day stores will be supplied.

Just how much the home cream delivery may be curtailed, dairymen said, may be seen in the fact that those now receiving a pint every other day might be lucky to get two half pints a week. The companies pointed out that "drivers will leave it if they have it, not if they haven't."

The milk situation, it was said, was not touched in the new program.

Rabbis Plead For Europe's Jews Today

The crack of the knout on the bared backs of hapless Jews in Nazi-occupied Europe will be echoed in Washington today as several hundred Orthodox rabbis arrive to present a petition to President Roosevelt and congressional leaders urging immediate attempts to rescue these unfortunates by opening havens in Palestine and other areas.

Timed to occur in the midst of the Jewish Holy Week, the pilgrimage is the opening phase of a mass campaign initiated by the Emergency Committee to Save the Jewish People of Europe.

Evidence that the Jews in Europe, outnumbered and virtually weaponless, are fighting the best they can, it was pointed out, is shown in the recent Nazi deportation order in Denmark. The Nazis said this order was the result of Jewish resistance to the German rule. Prior to that, a Jewish uprising in the Polish ghetto resulted in the slaying of scores of Nazi troops, but the Jews paid with thousands of dead.

The rabbis, representing the Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States, will arrive at Union Station at 12:15 p. m. They will meet at the Capitol Building with congressional leaders headed by Senators Alben W. Barkley and Charles L. McNary, at 1:30.

Special prayers will be offered at the Lincoln Memorial at 2:30 p. m. and at 4 p. m. the petition will be presented to the President at the White House.

Save for Fines, Judge Tells Bootlegger

When Mrs. Catherine Wright, 48, Negro, of 224 Parker st. ne., convicted of illegally selling whisky, asked Judge Armond Scott in Municipal Court for two weeks in which to pay a $50 fine, the judge replied:

"I can't understand that. Yours is the most profitable enterprise in the District. Next time, take some money out of your profits and put it away in a nest egg to meet these emergencies. Pay the fine now."

She did.

PUC Delays Action on Plea For More One-Man Trolleys

By Elwin Stouffer

Decision on whether the Capital Transit Co. would be allowed to convert 52 of its old two-man crew streetcars over to one-man operation was postponed by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday to give the streetcar men's union a chance to study the question.

The application to postpone decision was made by the transit company when officials met with members of the PUC in an all-day session in the District Building.

A surprise witness at the meeting was Msgr. Frances J. Haas, chairman of the President's Fair Employment Committee, who read a prepared statement asserting the question of employing Negroes as operators and conductors was now under study by both the company and the PFEC.

It has been a strong contention of the company that lack of available manpower was the foremost need for conversion of the cars. Msgr. Haas' statement also brought out the United States Employment Service had a pool of 328 Negroes available for the positions.

Only Eight Negroes Accepted

Of this number 300 had been offered referrals to the company of whom only 8 had been accepted. It was added of the eight who had accepted referrals one had been rejected by the company and seven applications were still pending.

It was also brought out by Msgr. Haas that if present streetcar operator discontinue work because of the hiring of Negroes they will not be able to obtain transfer certificates to other jobs.

Approval for the proposed change was given by the Northwest Citizens Association, the Mid-City Citizens Association, (which consented to the plan for the duration of the war) and the Federation of Citizens Associations.

T. Ormond Nichols, attorney for the union, told the meeting a committee of the union was studying the change and would report to the commission later this week. Decision is expected to be reached by the commission October 12.

Msgr. Haas' Statement

The statement by Msgr. Hass follows:

"The jurisdiction of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices extends to all of the employment policies of the Capital Transit Co. which concerns discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin. The company is, at the present time, under a directive order of FEPC to recruit, hire and up grade all qualified workers according to executive order 8802.

"This directive which was issued November 28, 1942, specifically requested the company to hire Negroes as platform men. Since June of this year, in conferences with FEPC, the company has indicated its willingness to comply with the requirements of executive order 9346 which amends order 8802.

"Since June the committee has been in close touch with the company in an attempt to help it comply in a manner most conducive to good public order. Our latest information from the company indicates that some progress is being made.

328 in USES Pool

"The committee was advised by the USES October 4, 1943, that there is currently a pool of 328 potential Negro applicants who are classified as bus drivers, or in related classifications such as chauffeurs, taxicab drivers, tractor and truck drivers, etc. The USES also reported at the same time that between May 10 and October 1, 1943, 300 Negro applicants having the basic qualifications for platform men were offered referral to the Capital Transit Co.

"However, the USES advised further there that only eight of this number accepted referral, the others stating they believed nothing would be gained by making application until the problem had been settled.

"Of the eight who have been referred one has been rejected and the applications of the others are pending. I might add that I was informed by USES yesterday that if any of the present employes of the company were to stop work in opposition to the employment of Negroes, such workers would not be able to get certificates of availability for employment elsewhere.

"I would like to indicate something of the experience of other cities regarding the employment of Negroes as bus and streetcar operators, conductors and motormen. Reports received by the committee within the last month from Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Buffalo, Tulsa and San Francisco, indicates that there is a total of 2053 Negroes employes in these capacities."

Victory Sidelights

OPA Enforcement Attorney Commended by Citizens Group

John L. Laskey, District enforcement attorney for the Office of Price Administration, was commended for his efforts against price ceiling violators, in a resolution adopted last night at a meeting of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association in the Central High School, 13th and Clifton sts. nw.

The association also approved the proposed conversion of two-man trolleys to one-man vehicles now under consideration by the Capital Transit Co.

A recommendation was made that fuel oil be distributed for the entire season instead of at specified intervals. It was explained that this change would enable the users to meet needs during an unusually cold spell while the supply under the present system might be exhausted at a critical time. George H. Brown, president of the association, presided.

Bond Sale Leader

Distribution office of the Chief of the Signal Corps, comprising 57 civilian employes and 33 officers, was notified yesterday in a military report on the third war loan that it led the entire Signal Corps in per capita war bond purchases with a total cash purchase of $25,788.25.

The group purchase did not include salary deduction war bond purchasees of 10.6 per cent for the civilians and 16 per cent by the officers. The deductions have been made monthly and no estimate of the combined total amounts are given. The group will receive a Treasury Department minute-man pennant soon from the hands of Maj. Gen. Harry C. Ingeles in recognition of its record.

Club to Open Soon

A new clubhouse for boys will be opened shortly at the McKinley Pool Field House, Lincoln rd. and Randolph pl. ne., by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, it was announced yesterday by H. Clifford Bangs, president of the club's board of directors.

The new project is another step in the battle against juvenile delinquency, officials of the club said. It will be the sixth club to be operated by the organization.

Civic leaders, notably the city Commissioners and Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, have indorsed the move.

Capital Air Protection Unrelaxed

Practice Drills And Blackouts to Go on Despite Curb On Spotter Service

By Walter Wood
Post Staff Writer

Curtailment of the Aircraft Warning Service performed by volunteers does not mean that the Nation's Capital is unprotected from air raids nor does it mean that there will be a lessening of the activities of Washington civilian defense workers, it was made known yesterday.

The District and vicinity will have just as many air-raid drills as deemed necessary, officials said, and the P-47 fighter planes based at nearby Camp Springs, Md., will be ready, as usual, to protect the Capital from enemy raiders, a statement by the Eastern Defense Command indicated.

Commissioner John Russell Young, District Civilian Defense director, informed volunteers there would be no letup in their work. Said Young:

"Along the coastal area, which includes the Washington region, we will maintain the same vigilance as in the past. We will continue practice drills and exercises, together with such periodic blackouts as may be required to enable this area to maintain proficiency in compliance with air raid alerts. There has been no general demobilization of the Aircraft Warning Service. Our Civilian Defense organization will continue in full force as heretofore."

Spotters Remain on "Alert"

The Eastern Defense Command reiterated that the volunteer plane but merely placed on an "alert spotters had not been disbanded, status," and implied that militarily protective forces were unchanged. A statement said:

". . . Other measures which will help to maintain an aircraft warning corps prepared at all times to go back onto the 24-hour duty basis immediately if need arises will include: Continuation of the aircraft recognition training program for personnel; the surprise alerting of posts and centers as ordered from time to time and rotation of personnel during the hours posts will be operated each week."

John B. Martin, acting director of Civilian Defense, in a statement directed at the Washington area, said OCD was "providing an operating program of civilian protection based on the realities of the war situation," and geared to the needs of each community nearby. Said Martin:

"Washington is clearly within the coastal area where the President has requested 'continued service and vigilance on the part of air raid wardens and other air raid protection volunteers.'

Practice Drills Go On

"This means a continuation in Washington of practice drills and exercises—and general participation in such blackout drills as military authorities deem necessary."

Meanwhile the Antiaircraft Artillery Command of the Military District of Washington said Gen. H. H. Arnold's directive to the Aircraft Warning Service volunteers did not affect the work of the women volunteers of their organization. The Antiaircraft Volunteers, an organization working with the AAC in plotting the course of airplanes flying in the Washington vicinity, will continue to collect information and report to the antiaircraft units defending Washington, it was said.

The work of the AAV becomes more vital, it was said, as one of the principal safeguards against a surprise attack over Washington.

Victory Certain, President Says In Opening Drive for War Fund

need.

"For these reasons, when your local war fund or community chest asks you to give—for our own forces, for our Allies, and for the needs at home, I ask all of you to think about it carefully before you give.

"I ask you to remember that the USO is your share of what we are doing for our own fighting men, and the forces behind the lines. I ask you to consider that War Prisoners Aid does what no government can do. I ask you to think of United Seamen's Service in terms of the people's debt to the men who took our ships across in the darkest hours of the war.

"And I ask you not to forget that the people of Russia, and China, and of all the other United Nations—and especially the unfortunate, hungry men, women and children of all the overrun and enslaved countries—see in your personal and friendly concern the brightest ray of hope and the greatest power for good in the world today—the sovereign voice of the people of the United States.

"I ask you, therefore, to give thoughtfully, and generously, and proportionately — remembering as you give, that a share in the National War Fund is a share in winning the war, and in winning the right of free men to live in a better world."

The Advanced Gift Division of the District Community War Fund Committee, announced last night, just before President Roosevelt went on the air that it had pledges totaling 10 per cent of its quota of $550,000.

The District's part in the national fund campaign began October 1 and will conclude October 31, according to Chairman Coleman Jennings, who with Lieut. Rudy Vallee and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard initiated the Department of Agriculture's part in the drive at a rally yesterday in the auditorium of the department on 14th st.

Unlike the Third War Fund campaign that began on the same date throughout the Nation and ended simultaneously, the Community War Fund opening date was a matter of local supervision. In Washington it began Friday. Yesterday's financial report by the Advanced Gift Division was the first to be made in the drive. The division received pledges totaling more than $51,000 which was announced at a meeting in the Hall of Flags in the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Chairman Jennings, at the agriculture meeting, stressed four "important facts in this Community War Fund campaign."

They are:

"1 This is a single appeal made on behalf of 145 units that will each benefit from your contribution and they in turn represent the home front, the war front and the Allied front.

"2. It is an important social gain, this consolidation of solicitation, one that the people 100 years from now will look back on.

"3. It consolidates the entire community in a great cause, Protestant, Catholic, Jew and others into one community spirit of giving for their united benefits.

"4. No one has to put up the full amount of cash (as was done in the bond sale). Those who give may pledge to give a little at regular intervals over the period of the year."

Kutz, Recreation Officials Visit Improved Playgrounds

Improvements made to 13 playgrounds through $400,000 provided under the Lanham Act were inspected yesterday by Col. Charles Kutz, Engineer Commissioner, and the District Recreation Board and staff.

Representatives of FWA, the FSA, the National Park Service and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission accompanied the District officials on the tour, which also included the Industrial Home that the Recreation Board some time ago requested for use as a recreation center.

The tour revealed that the funds were primarily used for grading, topsoiling and seeding of grounds that had been previously made available as play areas.

The most ambitious of the projects, that of developing the sports center located at the foot of East Capitol st., beyond the National Guard Armory, would utilize more than 30 acres of improved land. Costing $79,000, the area is designed to replace the playground space lost in the construction of the Jefferson Memorial in Potomac Park, and to provide a local parade grounds. Football fields and baseball dimonds are yet to be laid out, officials said.

Expressing approval of the projects as a whole, members of the Recreation Board stated they plan to make further improvements at Randall Playground, Negro project, located at South Capitol and H sts. where the unfenced area is being used by automobiles. Officials hope to construct a fence and to force the removal of the dog pound located within the grounds.

"For garaging the cost is $70,000 a year. With a capacity of 521 cars—just about our practicable working maximum—the cost of garaging figures out to less than $12 per month per car.

"As I have indicated, more than 150 vehicles, passenger cars and light trucks, are being garaged now. We have commitments thus far for a total of 386 cars and trucks occupying 413 spaces, from FWA, the Geological Survey, the Navy, SEC, OEM, the State Department, the Federal Power Commission and the National Housing Agency. Only 108 spaces are still available for assignment. Fourteen agencies remain to be heard from. Those which do not speak up quickly are likely to be left out."

The building is owned by National Mortage & Investment Co., which maintains offices in the building. The original rent was fixed at $135,000 in the contract, but this later was reduced by $75 which is to pay for the heat and hot water used by the investment company.

Real estate experts yesterday said that the comparison of valuation and rent figures showed a gross profit to the investment company of 13½ per cent, whereas business property in downtown Washington usually brings less than 10 per cent. Residential property brings 10 per cent gross, but the landlord has to make repairs. In downtown property it is customary for the tenant to make repairs, and this is provided for in the contract the FWA signed for the building.

The structure has a floor space of 235,269 square feet. The lease, which was signed August 9 is to expire on June 30, 1944.

The files of the committee also show that on September 16 of this year Ernest E. Hall, executive officer of the Federal Works Administration, wrote to Senator Byrd stating they were making plans to store and service 275 vehicles in the building, and service 150 additional cars.

As of Saturday night there were only 129 cars stored there.

From committee investigators it was learned that the FWA originally planned to ask the Director of the Budget to order other agencies to make use of the storage and other facilities at the garage, but protests from agencies concerned pervented the fulfillment of this plan. Now the FWA has notified eligible agencies in the city of the facilities that are available.

The committee also is concerned with the repairs and staff of employes, not reflected in the rental

However, some of the rental cost can be charged to other agencies, as the FWA spokesman said they planned to allot three of the ten stories to agencies desiring to store records.

D. C. Slum Job Cost Set At Millions

Senate Committee Hears Ihlder on Clearance Program Over 20-Year Period

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Slum clearance and low-rent housing in the District will require five million dollars yearly for the next 20 years, John Ihlder, National Capital Housing Authority administrator, yetserday told a Senate District housing subcommittee.

An alternative, he said, would be appropriations of 10 million dollars annually for two years and 5 million for each succeeding year until the sum reached 100 million. The figures, he emphasized, were "only an estimate" and had not been cleared with the Bureau of the Budget.

Gradual Clearance

He further estimated there are 20,000 substandard dwellings in Washington today and that many more probably will be added after the war. The 100 million would include more work by private enterprise than ever before, he added.

"The job of slum reclamation should be a careful, gradual one," Ihlder said. "If done in a live city, it can break even."

Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee, told Ihlder that "you've done an extraordinary job so far" and he was impressed with the number of slum projects handled by the NCHA.

"We've undertaken 14 of them but many were small," the administrator replied.

"I realize that and I think it is indicative that there has been extreme care taken in the operation of the project," Burton declared.

Millions Already Spent

Ihlder explained since 1934, when the District Alley Dwelling Act became law, $865,000 has been spent under Title 1, providing for slum reclamation; 15 million under Title 2, for low-rent housing; $3,200,000 for defense housing before Pearl Harbor, and under war housing, constructed since America entered the war, 11 million has been spent for demountable homes and $3,500,000 for demolishables, or temporary structures.

Since congressional action last year reducing funds available for Title 1 properties to $12,000 annually, Ihlder asserted, the adequate maintenance of reclaimed properties has become impossible and NCHA has been forced to allow them to deteriorate.

"The financial objective of NCHA is to break even," he said, "so it conducts its operations with the aim ultimately of having assets equal to all of its expenditures.

District Tour Planned

"At one time 20 to 25 per cent of the tenants on some properties were receiving material assistance from other agencies, public or private. Today 69 per cent of NCHA's tenants are paying economic rents, having climbed the ladder to full self-support, and a number of them have been graduated to privately owned dwellings, some to homes they themselves are buying. A laregr number could have been graduated had privately onwed dwellings been available.

Senator Burton announced after the hearing that he will accompany Ihlder on a tour of Type 1 properties at 10 a. m. Saturday.

Washington Man Given Purple Heart For Battle Injuries

A clipping from a Honolulu paper, sent by someone unknown to here yesterday informed Mrs. Fredericka Epstein that her husband, pharmacist's Mate Fred S. Epstein, had been awarded the Order of the Purple Heart.

EPSTEIN

The award was made, the clipping said, for injuries Epstein received while aboard the USS Yorktown in the Battle of Midway. Before reporting for sea duty the day after Pearl Harbor, he lived in Washington at 1708 W st. se., where Mrs. Epstein still resides. She has not seen him since that day.

Epstein previously received a commendation from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, for volunteering to reboard the carrier Yorktown, when an effort was made to salvage her. He was aboard when she was sunk.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

World leadership in the production and creation of new materials as well as prosperity at home in the postwar era depends upon how effectively we utilize the war plants. So declared Hugh Fulton, counsel of the Truman Committee, speaking before members of the Takoma Park Women's Club at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Pinch hitting for Senator Truman, who was called out of town by the illness of his mother, Fulton pointed out that before the war we lagged behind Germany in many fields, but now have a chance not only to surpass Germany but lead in the production of new materials. However, he warned that before we could do so we had a pioneering job to do. For one thing we must learn new ways of making old things.

"Just take the matter of furniture," he said. "Now chairs have to be made in parts and put together. But if we can make a chair in one mold—plastics—it will be much cheaper. And the bathtub that you now pay about $20 for could be purchased in plastics for around two or three dollars."

He went on to point out that you might have a new type of automobile made mostly of plastic and much cheaper. Also there are new developments in fabrics—nylon, for example, to say nothing of airplanes, and hundreds of other things.

So that the United States may lead in postwar production as well as win the war, the Truman Committee investigates to make sure that plants are placed where they can be of use in peacetime . . . no more Muscle Shoals are wanted—according to Fulton, who outlined the main objective of the committee, which is to prevent waste.

Except for the people's support, the speaker declared, the Truman Committee could not operate so effectively. "This Government stands or falls on public opinion," Fulton asserted.

Preceding the speech a luncheon and business meeting were held to inaugurate the club's fall season.

Wife Is Torn Between Desire to Be Hospitable To Husband's Parents, Now Staying Indefinitely With Them, and Wish to Have Privacy Restored

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I hope you can help me solve the problem that is confronting me. About the middle of July, my father-in-law accepted a position in Washington, and since my mother-in-law was unable to accompany him at the time, my husband and I thought it was only right to invite him to live with us, rather than to take a room,—which, however, he could well afford. About two weeks ago, my mother-in-law arrived; and now she, too, is staying with us. She is a very excellent woman; and although all four of us get along together splendidly, my husband and I nevertheless feel the need of privacy.

It seems that their apartment will not be ready for perhaps a month, or maybe longer. Our problem is this: Would we, my husband and I, be justified in explaining to them how we feel? We would broach the subject tactfully, of course; but we are very much afraid of hurting their feelings. Is our attitude selfish? Our apartment is very small; and consequently very crowded at present; which is in itself inconvenient, aside from the lack of privacy. However, my husband and I want to do the right thing in the circumstances; and will appreciate your advice.

Other questions are these: How far should mature-age offspring go, in giving up their own freedom to accommodate their parents? In general, what should be the social relationship between parents and married children? Do parents have a right to see their married children daily? Or,—as I believe to be correct,—should a hands-off policy be observed, so that the married children may live independently, with no outside (even though well-meant) interference whatsoever? I shall be looking forward to your views on this subject. E. R.

Those Least Considerate Are Most Easily "Hurt"

DEAR E. R.: It seems to me the delicate question of what attitude to adopt toward your parents-in-law, in the current emergency, depends on the real meaning of your casual remark, to-wit: "Their apartment will not be ready for a month, or maybe longer." If this statement means that they have already secured an apartment, and that the indefinite delay about moving in is due to renovations now in process of being made; or to uncertain date of arrival of their furnishings, now in transit from "back home." —then I should think that as a matter of elementary courtesy and filial respect, you ought to treat them as welcome guests for as long as they choose to share cramped quarters with you. For in this case, the theory on both sides must be that they will be going to their own place "any day;" and that the present arrangement is definitely transitory, with its automatic dissolution already clearly in view.

If such is the case, to ask them to leave sooner, as a concession to your comfort or desire for privacy,—no matter how diplomatically the request were presented,—would be as astoundingly rude, I should think, as, for instance, to send a cordially invited weekend guest packing after Sunday breakfast when he knew that you knew he couldn't make a train until Monday morning. If, however, the uncertainty about "their apartment's" date of availability means they are waiting hopefully for some present occupant to move out and make way for them,—counting on his conditional promise to vacate in another month "or maybe later,"—then that is a different story, of course. In that case, they should be as conscious as you are, of the awkward imposition their indefinitely lingering "visit" inflicts;—and should be as insistent on moving to a hotel, until they "get settled," as you would be secretly relieved to see them go. But if they don't happen to have that much consideration, I frankly don't know how you can ease them out without "hurting their feelings." One of the paradoxes of human nature is that persons who are least considerate of others' feelings are themselves most susceptible to "hurt."

Wise Parents Do Not Rob Offspring of Privacy

In my opinion, you are not selfish in wanting domestic privacy,—even from (or perhaps especially from) parents. You would only be selfish in impatiently catering to this natural and proper desire, at the expense of unmistakeable discourtesy to invited guests,—which is the position in which you yourself have placed your in-laws, at this time. As for your other questions: 1. In emergency, mature-age offspring should cheerfully "go" whatever length is necessary, in temporarily sacrificing freedom of action to "accomodate" their parents' real need of loyal helpfulness. But married children are not ethically required to make martyrs of themselves, even on a short-term basis, pampering parents who are financially well able to take care of themselves. 2. In general, the social relationship between parents and married children should be that of tried-and-true friends, who have the civilized intelligence to accord each other "equal rights" to enjoy marital privacy and personal independence of action. 3. Parents do NOT "have a right" to see their married children daily; and if they are wise parents, whose child-rearing policy was aimed at developing their offspring into psychologically mature adults, they will never seek to promote daily association after their children's marriage. 4. The "hands-off" policy in relation to married offspring IS the correct policy for parents to observe.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain

Too many women alternately starve or stuff. They fight off 10 pounds or 20 on a diet, then promptly return to over-eating and gain them all back. Eventually this means another bout with the pounds.

But lately I have had any number of requests for a plan of eating that will keep weight at normal. I take that as a healthy sign. You can eat to keep your weight right where it should be and you don't have to diet, either.

Almost all of you want to know how many calories you need. If you want the scientific facts, the average woman in sedentary work requires 2,100 calories a day, and in moderately active work, 2,500 a day. Frankly, I think the 2,500 calorie allowance is a bit liberal. But, at any rate, it isn't necessary to add up columns of figures on calories every day to keep the pounds in check. The easiest and best plan is to have a food pattern to go by.

The foods which furnish the most in the way of nutrition also help you to keep your weight at normal so it is just plain commonsense to build your menus around these foods.

Milk is a food we all need. It furnishes protein, vitamins and phosphorus along with calcium and most of us don't get enough calcium. You don't have to drink milk. You can have it in soups, on cereals, in milk beverages like cocoa, or in milk desserts. Your food pattern should include either a pint of milk a day or one-half pint and an ounce of cheese.

Try to have an egg every day. Eggs give you protein, vitamins and other things, iron helps to keep the disposition sweet. They say women particularly need it.

Be sure to have a green leafy vegetable of some kind every day. This is a very necessary food in your pattern for good nutrition and normal weight. It furnishes an abundance of iron and vitamins and is low in calories.

In general, here is what you should have, every day: Three vegetables, two fruits, whole grains in cereal and bread, milk, an egg, plus meat, fish or fowl. Or, in place of the meat, have beans, soybeans, or extra cheese.

Many of the overweights who insist they don't eat much skip their protective foods, especially milk, cheese, eggs and greens. They stick to a high starch and sugar diet and pile on pounds without gaining in vitality. And that's the wrong food pattern.

The Cliche Girls Discuss the War

"What on earth's become of Gracie Gadd?"

"I understand she's giving her all to the war effort."

"The last time I saw her she was doing her bit at home."

"But now she's taken a war job to release a man for the fighting front."

"What kind of a job?"

"She's toiling long hours as a woman welder."

"Just for the duration, I suppose?"

"Yes—just till the boys come home again."

"Did you know Marjorie Flitt had been a victory gardener all summer?"

"No! what did she raise?"

"Nothing.— Nature was against her."

"What's she doing now?"

"I think she's actively engaged in postwar planning."

"How fascinating!"

"Yes, she feels strongly that more should be done for the Little People in the World of Tomorrow."

"That's true—if we expect to win both the war and the peace."

"Well, I never see anybody—since I've been operating on a wartime schedule."

"I've put my life on a complete wartime basis—for the duration."

"I think everybody on the home front should."

"Absolutely! We should all work harder than we ever have before."

"Yes, and buy more bonds than we possibly can."

"That's right. It's the only way to back the attack."

"What do you think of inflation?"

"I think it's getting out of hand."

"Yes, I'm doing a little duration shopping."

"So am I. Of course, I don't believe in hoarding. I'm just buying what I need."

"Oh, so am I—just what I need. You have to do that much to keep up morale."

"Yes, both at home and abroad."

"Have you any postwar plans?"

"Yes, I think we should cooperate with other nations in the new world order that lies ahead."

"Yes, but no entangling alliances."

"Oh, no. We must preserve the American way of life."

"Yes, and at the same avert further bloodshed."

"Yes, and insure a peaceful world for our children's children."

"Oh, definitely."

"When do you think the war will be over?"

"Well, anything's likely to happen before we're through."

"I understand informed observers say it will last at least until 1945."

"Yet I heard from authoritative sources that Germany might collapse unexpectedly."

"Of course, a lot of that's propaganda. Military and naval experts don't give credence to such reports."

"Still—history always repeats itself."

"The radio said that official Washington expected a long war and warned against overoptimism."

"A lot of that might be propaganda."

"Authentic sources of information discount an early ending to the war."

"Yet a spokesman for high authorities was quoted recently as saying total victory was in sight. I understand the Balkans are seething with rumors."

"You have to take those rumors with a grain of salt. Most students of strategy predict hard going ahead."

"But usually reliable sources say the unexpected may happen."

"Well, I suppose at any rate things will go on as they are for the duration."

"Yes, definitely! At least for the duration of the duration."

Market Report

You may not want a pineapple "dynamite bomb," but you'll probably be interested in the real fruit. It's still scarce, but obtainable. Other fresh fruits and vegetables which the War Food Administration found on yesterday morning's retail market are listed below.

Plentiful — Sweet potatoes, white potatoes, squash, tomatoes, snap beans, sweet peppers, cauliflower, kale, collards, rape, mustard greens, turnip greens, apples, cantaloupes, avocados, limes, lemons, honeydew melons and Western grapes (including white Malagas, Tokays and Ribiers).

Moderate—Broccoli, cabbage, beets, turnips, rutabaga, celery, carrots, mushrooms, acorn squash, Hubbard squash, onions and lettuce.

Light—Brussels sprouts, lima beans, cucumbers, chicory, escarole, eggplant, salsify, corn, celery cabbage, persnips, parsley, okra, radishes, pumpkins, oranges, pears, plums, prunes, peaches, Eastern grapes, Cranshaw melons, casabas, Persian melons, Oriental persimmons and pineapples.

Care in Cleaning

The National Safety Council says that you should always be careful of fire when you attempt home dry cleaning of any sort. Even though the fluid you happen to be using is marked "non-explosive," it may be a mixture of flammable solvent and quick-evaporating non-flammable solvent so that it will tend to become flammable, especially if used near open flames. Or, if you are using a non-flammable chlorinated solvent "straight," remember that the fumes have a toxic and anesthetic effect when used in quantity.

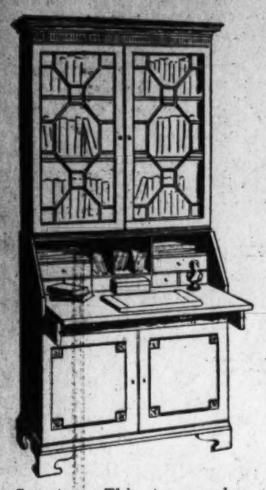
Desks for the Duration—And After



Secretary—This type makes the greatest use of space it occupies. Books, above, shelves or drawers below, with ample space between for writing and filing.

By Martha Ellyn

There is one piece of furniture that you can buy for "duration" living quarters that may well be a carry-over into a permanent home. Guess what? A chair? A desk? Both are good answers.

The desk is one of the most useful pieces of furniture. It is "functional" to the n'th degree. It doesn't have to be a trivial thing on spindly legs, but can be a combination of sufficient writing and filing space, with bookshelves or even a chest of drawers.

If you had a home desk you'd have a place for stationery which would leave it unrumpled. Unanswered letters, unpaid bills, ration book, address book, insurance policies, receipts, canceled checks, and many other important records can also have their particular niche. A place for everything and everything in its place. You won't have to waste precious time looking all over the house for the thing you need. And you won't have to haul out the card table on which to write or figure accounts.

The home desk is a wide departure in design from the office desk. Designers have gone back to the master styles of the eighteenth century for inspiration and created desks that will fit in beautifully with the mahogany pieces in your living room, bedroom and for that matter, even in the dining room if necessary. With a superstructure for china and subdrawers for linens it takes the place of the china closet and, when you move and put the desk in the living room, out goes the china and in come the books.

Kidney-Kneehole (left)—Graceful lines of this desk give a rare combination of beauty and utility, with plenty of space for stationery and writing equipment. Highboy (right)—This Chippendale chest-on-chest, is utilitarian to the n'th degree combining maximum of storage space with adequate secretarial facilities.

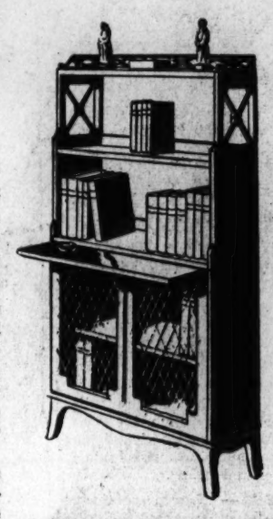
Tambour—Of Sheraton ancestry, this desk fits delightfully in bedroom or living room ensemble. Tambours conceal the desk features.

The desk is very much an occasional piece and be it in design-ancestry, Queen Anne, Chippendale, Adam, Heppelwhite, Sheraton or Duncan Phyfe, it will fit in beautifully with furniture of any of these styles. It will even fit in with French Empire or English Regency. This is a piece of furniture that you can go "all out" in buying, just so it isn't either a midget or a jumbo job.

In style there is a wide range, including the beautiful and useful types. Some even have secret drawers or recesses where you temporarily park the family jewels or the war bond. Desks with real locks are better than those with only dummy keyholes. These are days to hold onto your possessions zealously.

Desks are life-time furniture and quickly become a cherished possession, so be sure to select a good one. It will soon pay for itself in convenience and on saving in wear and tear on all the family's nerves.

Only you can decide upon the type of desk which best suits your needs. Pictured here are representative styles of desks. Look at them to see which kind will give you the most service now, and fit into your home scene after the war.



Bookcase—Primarily a bookcase but with pull-out shelf that may serve as emergency desk in space where other writing facilities are not available.

Breakfront (left)—Adaptable to living room, bedroom or dining room, because the features permit highly diversified usage of storage space. Also a high note in decor. Corner—(right) In rooms with limited wall space this type desk is the only solution to the addition of another piece of furniture. It contributes beauty as well as utility.

Modern—A combination of drawer space with dummy drawer front dropping to form writing surface and revealing desk accessories.

MEMO TO MISS BROWN

SUBJECT:

Swing Shift Stuff

By Virginia Reid

Now that you're working at hours when all of your fortunate friends are home in bed (you've used those very words yourself, Miss Brown) you are, no doubt, crying your pretty eyes out because you can't find things to do with those odd daylight and after-midnight hours that are spared to you for fun time.

You're sort of silly if you're moaning, because all of the interesting things in the world do not go on after dark. (We have no statistics handy, but it's nevertheless true.) In fact, there are lots of war workers in Washington whose hours are equally topsy-turvy and a corresponding number of social events in full operation.

The Walsh Club for War Workers (which carries on numerous activities) is also open during the day and had, in addition to planned daytime programs, facilities for general lounging around and enjoying life. The club is located at 2118 Massachusetts ave. nw. (in the rear) and opens at 3 p. m. for such as you.

Then, there's the USO Club of National Catholic Community Service at 1814 N st. nw., which is also open (but all day) and has such things as pianos, sewing machines, games, writing rooms and voice recordings for you to play with. This club also has a pretty full program just for night workers, including ballroom dance class on Thursdays from 1:30 to 3 p. m., sewing, choral club, arts and crafts and wardrobe planning class on Mondays. Night workers may register for the club's super Saturday and Sunday dances on Tuesdays from 2 to 3 p. m.

There are games, classes and dancing for Negro night workers at the Hearthstone Club, 1703 11th st. nw., during the day (and, of course, similar goings-on for day workers in the evening).

The YWCA has a full daytime and late evening program for night workers. Especially big stuff is the Thursday recreation and dancing session from 11:30 to 2:30. There's a pretty continuous lot of fun at the "Y" any day of the week, too—what with a swimming pool, club rooms and gym.

The Phyllis Wheatley YWCA also has a good old-time program—informal recreation for night workers on Mondays. Then, there's a social hour with snacks) on Thursdays from 11:30 to 2:30 a. m. for an after work lift, made especially for swing-shifters.

The "Early Birds" at the Jewish Community Center have a merry time at their social club on Tuesdays at 1:30 p. m. (and on into the afternoon). There's also a better-than-average musical here on Fridays at 1 p. m.

Saturday afternoons are literally packed with things to do—and you, worker-at-night, are one of the few who have a chance to enjoy them. There is, for example, a tour of the city (closing with supper) which is sponsored by the Federation of Churches and gets together in the Service Men's Lounge of the National Gallery of Arts at 2 p. m. And there's also a nice selection of hikes, bike trips and picnics planned for every Saturday by American Youth Hostels (Executive 3500) and the Northeast USO (Franklin 3539).

If this array of what's-doing doesn't satisfy you, then look over the education situation and take your "night school" during the day. Most of the schools hereabouts operate on a day and night basis. Or, at the very least, you can thank your lucky stars that you needn't do your shopping on Thursday nights!

Working on the night shift is not quite so dismal as it may appear at first glance, Miss Brown, so don't waste your precious afternoons in unneeded sleep or unnecessary weeping!

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There has been so much written in this column about the three-meal schedule it is only fair to point out one of the commonplace obstacles the mother of a young baby may encounter.

The baby may very well want to eat only three times a day, but his nap habits still may, be attached to the four hour period and come at 10 and 2 as formerly.

That long mid-morning nap, right after the bath, has been habitual from birth. The little cat-nap in the afternoon, cuts the long afternoon hours in half and keeps the baby good-tempered until bedtime.

When the three-meal schedule is installed the naps come more naturally right after the noon meal, or around 12:30 and many a child cannot possibly wait that long, but falls asleep around 10 just as usual.

This throws the mother off and makes her feel three meals are not possible for her sleepy baby until he or she is old enough to want only one nap a day.

Suppose instead of throwing out the three-meal schedule we compromise somewhat with its hours. If the baby is sleepy around 10, by all means let him sleep. Give him his daily portion of orange juice and cod liver oil then and put him in bed. If he could be in bed by 9:30 and would sleep until 1:30 or later he would be ready for his good, big, noon meal.

Presumably, he would be drowsy again around four o'clock at which time he would take his second, short nap. Even if he sleeps only an hour or so he could have his supper at 5:30 to 6 p. m. when he awoke. Naturally, he would not be ready to go to bed again immediately but would stay up until 7 or thereabouts.

The question is how readily will he go to bed without a bite of food? He may very well go without wanting more than a drink of water. But, if he wants half a glass of warm milk, don't deny it to him.

These compromises prevent the child from eating skimpily because he is too sleepy at noon to do justice to his meal; or losing his good sleeping habits because by the time he is put down to nap he has passed the first keen fervor for sleep.

Palencias Here for Art Exhibit

In from Mexico for an artistic interlude in Washington are painter-diplomat Ceferino Palencia and his talented author-diplomat wife, Senora Isabel de Palencia.

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, has sent out invitations for the 4 o'clock opening this afternoon of Senor Palencia's one-man art exhibit at the National Museum. Here from their refuge in Mexico are these two political refugees from the Franco government in Spain, and the Capital is fated to hear a great deal about them before their departure next month.

Mexican Motif In Pictures

Senor Palencia, who was a fellow student with Diego Riviera at the studio of famed Eduardo Chicharro in Spain, will have 26 canvases on display at the museum. They are all Mexican-inspired and have their background in the folklore of the country. The exhibit will be open until the end of the month.

Versatile Senor Palencia was Spain's Minister to Latvia and Lithuania while his capable wife was serving as the last envoy of the Loyalist government to Sweden. She is a well-known author and a firm believer in an homogeneous Western Hemisphere. While visiting here last fall, Senora de Palencia toured the country talking good neighbor policy.

"The interchange of understanding between the two continents of the Western Hemisphere must be carried on by every man and woman as individuals, rather than by officials and missions," she comments. "The Americas are the hope of the world. It is imperative that the people—the little people as well as officials—know and understand each other."

Author of Several Books

But energetic Senora de Palencia does not believe in words alone. She has a definite campaign of action in mind and has toured the Latin-American countries as well as the United States with her ideas. Education for understanding is her thesis and one that she expounds with great ability.

For some years she served as Spain's labor representative in Geneva, where she became an outstanding international figure. Among the books from her pen are several children's books, her autobiography "In Place of Splendor," and her most recent, "I Must Have Liberty."

About Washington . . .

"FOR CENTURIES war was a sport for men. It was the easiest road to honor, glory and power. This was true, whether in the Roman Empire or a tribe of American Indians. . . . We have given little credit to our peacemakers, or to those who strive for peace."

Representative James William Fulbright of Arkansas, whose peace resolution recently passed the House was talking to a luncheon gathering of almost 300 Junior Leaguers.

Rep. Fulbright

Trimly turned out for the organization's opening meeting of the year, the group listened with marked interest as the 38-year-old member of Congress offered suggestions as to how members of the Junior League could improve the state of the Nation and support a definite plan for lasting peace.

Pointing out that women had as great responsibility as men in shaping and controlling public affairs, both in time of war and in time of peace, he urged those who heard him to:

(1) Concern themselves with ordinary politics; not only to vote but to know why they were voting, and to keep well informed on every phase of government.

(2) Use their influence to improve educational facilities, since they, rather than the men, had the chief responsibility in seeing that their children had the advantages of education.

(3) Improve the quality of government by supporting men of greatest ability in public office. Otherwise the more able and more brilliant men would choose their life work in another field, leaving politics and the maintenance of peace to those less competent and more self-seeking.

Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson, president of the league, introduced the guest speaker after she had made her brief report on the status of the organization she heads, and had urged all members to devote more time to community and welfare projects. She also mentioned that more than a fifth of the league membership now had full-time paid work, while most of the others were negotiating around-the-clock jobs as housewives. She presented Mr. Fulbright as the person best prepared to advise members on the way their activities could tie in with peace plans and the postwar world.

The luncheon, taking place at the Sulgrave Club, was the first event of its kind since Pearl Harbor. In contrast to times past, when the autumn opening meeting combined the characteristic qualities of a sorority reunion and a fashion show, yesterday's get-together definitely featured a serious note—one quite in keeping with the wartime tempo. Many members, wearing service uniforms, consulted their wrist watches frequently and, in numerous instances, had to tear away to war jobs before the luncheon program was finished.

A busy lot, and a worthy lot—that Washington Chapter of the Junior League . . . which now includes dozens of interleague members, living in the Nation's Capital for the duration.

Officers for the year—all of whom were introduced at the luncheon yesterday—include, in addition to Mrs. Wilson, Miss Virginia Flannery and Mrs. Kenneth Holland, vice presidents; Mrs. Francis Almirall, secretary, and Mrs. Williams S. Anderson, treasurer.

SCISSORS WILL FLASH and fly through surgical dressings today as "Wives of the House" start their Red Cross work for the year in their headquarters at the Library of Congress annex. From now until Congress adjourns next summer, they'll be working each Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m., carrying on the work begun last winter. Mrs. Charles Dewey of Illinois is chairman, Mrs. Robert Doughton of North Carolina is honorary chairman, and an accomplished corps of instructors is also in the group. Miss Vera Bloom, daughter of Representative Sol Bloom of New York, is secretary.

Away down South, there's a legend that the State of Alabama is divided into three significant parts—north Alabama, south Alabama and Barbour County. The county seat of Barbour is Eufaula, with a population of only 6000. But from that town have come four Governors of Alabama, four members of Congress, and the wife of a current Senator, Lister Hill.

Alabama Governor

Last night at a small dinner at the home of Senator and Mrs. Hill, there was a good deal of talk about Eufaula . . . because the hostess and the guest of honor, Governor of Alabama Chauncey Sparks, hailed from there. Among those dining with the Hills and the Governor, and, incidentally talking about Eufaula, were Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally, Senator and Mrs. Burnet Maybank and Representative Henry B. Steagall, dean of the Alabama congressional delegation. Governor Sparks, a bachelor, plans to be in Washington the remainder of the week.

Appearing on the bookstands yesterday was a first novel by a widely known Washingtonian, Mannix Walker, who went to Boston for the setting of his book, and to Sophocles for his title, "Count on Two Days." ("No man should count on two days," said the Greek philosopher.) The book is about a slightly mad Boston family, and is written in a light vein. "Just escape fiction," says the author, who turned to novelizing when the foreign service school he headed was discontinued for the duration . . . Mrs. Barkley Here From San Antonio

"I just hope he won't be transferred before I get back."

He is Maj. David Barkley, son of the Senator from Kentucky, and Mrs. Alben Barkley, and an operations officer at Randolph Field near San Antonio, Tex. She is his popular wife, the former Miss Dorothy Graves, and she arrived Sunday, visiting the Barkleys on one of those "week-or-10-days" visits.

She braved the inconvenience of present-day train travel to bring 9-month-old Dorothy Ann to see her grandparents and agreed all too cheerfully that any train trip is hard.

Historical old San Antonio, which swims with khaki uniforms even in peacetime, is a solid mass of olive drab these days, according to Mrs. Barkley. "I never see anything but soldiers," she said.

Hello, Mrs. Everybody

Order Your Coats From Storage Now,

Before the Weather Overtakes You

. . . and not only the weather. We ourselves are most concerned with the necessary restrictions on deliveries, and the fact that we're understaffed in our storage vaults. There's more than a slight chance that if you don't order your coats early, you may have to wait a few days for them, for we've no longer a choice in the matter.

Time was when you could call us of a cold and frosty morning and have your coat out there by special delivery the same day . . . or you could come in to see us, and after a wait of fifteen minutes or a little longer, we helped you into your coat. But not these days . . . and so we urge you to be provident . . . call us soon and order your coats from storage, that there may be no disappointments when cold weather arrives.

Local Girl on Staff of Club For Servicewomen in Algiers

Parents of Harriet Ann Jackson Learn Of Her Whereabouts from Newspaper Story

By Peggy Preston

There is more than one way of overseas personnel to foil the mail censors. Best bet is to engage in an activity that will warrant mention in a press dispatch back home . . . and presto, your whereabouts will no longer be a military secret.

Such is the experience of a Washington girl, one Harriet Ann Jackson, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Hilton Jackson, picked up the New York Times recently to read of her exploits in Algiers.

"We had an idea she was in North Africa, but we didn't know exactly where," explains Mrs. Jackson, who admittedly is more delighted with discovering the whereabouts of her daughter than with the activity that made this knowledge possible.

Club Offers Unique 'Bait'

Reason for Miss Jackson's acclaim is her connection with a unique "club" for enlisted women in any of the Allied forces, which was set up a few weeks ago in Algiers. A member of the Red Cross Club Recreation Division, she is serving as assistant director of this club, that offers a bait to members which has a hollow ring for the unfortunates remaining in this man-deserted land.

It is maintained as a center where girls in uniform may be alone as often and as long as they please.

According to the Times dispatch from Algiers, the club is being heralded as an outstanding success. Located in a requisitioned private home with a superb terrace, the club offers a homelike haven for the hundreds of girls stationed in or near Algiers. Two upper floors are set aside for those who want to get away from GI surroundings and military supervision. Here they may read, write, chat or exchange manicures to their hearts' content.

Men Seek Invitation To Weekly Dances

Another major attraction offered by the club is a bathtub . . . and hot water, a luxury almost unknown in the North African city. Still another is a sewing machine.

But Miss Jackson and her superior, Miss Katherine S. Chelbe of Detroit, are realistic enough to know that, even in Algiers, a little male company is desirable at times. So they have instituted Saturday night dances on the terrace, and, it is said, servicemen hover near the grounds, patiently hoping for an invitation to attend.

The daughter of a well-known Washington lawyer, Harriet Ann Jackson has been serving overseas since last July. Before entering the Red Cross, she did research for the War Department here and prior to that did historical research work in Richmond. She is a graduate of Hollins College and took her master's degree in American history at Radcliffe College. She has one sister, Mrs. Paul F. Hannah, wife of Lieutenant Colonel Hannah of the Signal Corps, and a brother, John W. Jackson, former assistant district attorney.

Joins Parents in Virginia Home

Lieut. Thomas Moncure of the Army has joined his parents, Judge and Mrs. Robinson Moncure, at their home, 500 Janneys lane, on Seminary Hill near Alexandria, for a stay of several weeks. He is convalescing after having been a patient at Walter Reed General Hospital in Washington for the last month and a half.

The young officer, who is in the Cavalry, expects to resume active duty the latter part of October.

Henry Moyles Now Visiting Walter Moyles; Widely Feted

Will Leave Tomorrow for Home in Salt Lake City; Popular Here

Winding up a whirlwind stay in the Capital are Mr. and Mrs. Henry Moyle, who will be off tomorrow to return to their home in Salt Lake City.

Mr. and Mrs. Moyle, who have been visiting Mr. Moyle's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moyle, at the Broadmoor here, arrived in the Capital a little over a week ago and have been feted constantly by their many friends in Washington.

Finding that a legal case would necessitate his coming, East Henry Moyle decided it was an ideal time to combine that and his vacation trip. After making arrangements with his brother the two couples met in New York, for a week of vacationing before coming on to town here.

Among the entertainments for the popular couple was a dinner given Monday by the Walter Moyles, when the guests included Maj. and Mrs. William Yeates, who are also Salt Lake City folk.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Norwood Nichol gave a dinner for the Moyles and on this evening they will be feted again at a dinner to be given by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ogden at their home Pen-y-Bryn, near Olney, Md.

AMERICA MUST SAVE MORE FUEL THIS WINTER . . !
★ Say Government Authorities ★

Another winter of war for America finds the heating problem even more acute than last year. All the heat-saving measures you've ever used are again necessary. And you'll be wise to discover new ones. For the greater comfort of your family and as an important contribution to the war effort, every bit of heat must be carefully conserved.

HEAT-SAVING HINTS EVERYONE CAN FOLLOW—
Close doors quickly when you enter or leave the house. Put a rug against bedroom doors at night. When ventilating rooms, turn off heat and close doors to keep cold air out of other parts of the house. Close fireplace damper. Keep heating plant and heat pipes free from soot.

30% of all heat loss goes out the windows

By proper use of your cloth window shades you can reduce heat loss through glass panes by as much as one-third and thus save up to 10% on fuel. Scientific tests conducted by the Armour Research Foundation have convincingly proved this fact. A drawn shade creates an insulating dead air space between the shade and the pane.

Chester Thrift, House Press Official, Dies

Chester Thrift, 41, assistant superintendent of the House Press Gallery and a lifelong resident of Washington, died yesterday at his home, 1218 33d st. nw.

Members of Congress who had known him for many years voiced sorrow at his death. He had worked as usual Monday, and there was no forewarning of the illness that struck him.

His wife, Virginia, and son, Chester, jr., were with him when he died.

Funeral Friday

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. Friday at Chambers Funeral Home, 3072 M st. nw. Burial will be in Leesburg, Va.

Representative Dondero (Republican) of Michigan announced Mr. Thrift's death to the House shortly after noon.

He recalled Mr. Thrift had worked at the Capitol nearly a quarter of a century, starting as a page boy October 6, 1919, and as assistant superintendent of the House press gallery since 1934.

"He was one of the most faithful servants that we had in the gallery," said Dondero. "He was loved by all who knew him, he was devoted to his work and trusted and respected by all who made his acquaintance."

Representatives Manasco (Democrat) of Alabama, and Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican) of Massachusetts, joined in the tribute.

"I want to say that I have known Chester Thrift for 11 years," said Manasco, "and I know that he was one of the best liked men in the press gallery.

"He was devoted to his duty, he had a delightful sense of humor when things were going tough. Chester always had a little saying or a little action that would soften the temper of everybody. He was a very faithful employe of the House and will be missed not only by the newspaper boys but by the committee chairmen and their clerks, because he kept up with that phase of the work of the House.

Mrs. Rogers recalled having talked with him only the day before, and she added:

"I want to pay my tribute to him as a man and for his work, faithfully and perfectly done. His work was always helpful and useful. He was a fine, patriotic citizen. We will all miss him."

Before working for the House, Mr. Thrift had been employed by Western Union and by International News Service. He was born in Georgetown. He was a member of the National Press Club.

Dr. T. A. Poole's Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Funeral services for Dr. Thomas A. Poole, 70, internationally-known sinus specialist, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Gawler's Chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Interment will be in the Rock Creek Cemetery.

Dr. Poole died yesterday at Emergency Hospital. He resided at 3610 O st. nw. with his wife, Mrs. Margaret E. Poole.

Dr. Poole had conducted research into the field of sinus in the field of crimology. He was called in 1932 to Scotland Yard to confer with officials on a system of identifying criminals by X-ray pictures of sinus passages. He maintained no two persons have identical sinuses.

Another one of his theories was that sinus infections were a major cause of drug addiction and crime. Last month he was indicted on a charge of illegally selling drugs to two police informers whom he maintained complained of sinus trouble.

He was found dead by his wife, Sunday morning, seated in a living-room chair. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Capitol Gets Secret Peace Finance Plan

By the Associated Press

Behind closed doors, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau laid before key congressional committees yesterday the broad outlines of a plan for postwar international stabilization of currencies—one likely to prove the center of a bitter legislative battle in coming months.

Protests promptly were entered, both against the "secret sessions" and the plan itself. Republican Representatives contended the project envisioned the formation of a world Reconstruction Finance Corp. and would mean the "surrender" of American rights.

Morgenthau spoke to an executive session of the Senate Banking and Foreign Relations Committees, later to a closed meeting of the House Banking, Foreign Affairs and Coinage Committees.

Representative Somers (Democrat) of New York, chairman of the House Coinage Committee, said the House group was in "general accord in the need for world economic stabilization," and added that "30 per cent" had been advanced as a figure on this Nation's contribution to the capital of a world bank, though he emphasized that percentage was tentative.

Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan, ranking minority member of the House Banking Committee, declared, however, that "I got the impression it (the International Bank) was probably intended to operate as an international RFC." He said he planned to introduce a resolution immediately authorizing the banking committee to investigate the proposal.

Representative Smith (Republican) of Ohio, another member of the Banking Committee, said he had protested against the secrecy, feeling that there was nothing in the project that "the American people should not know about, and nothing in it that would give the enemy any comfort or help."

WLB Order Challenged By Ward's

Montgomery Ward & Co., Inc., one of the largest department store and mail order house chains, asked District Court yesterday to set aside a National War Labor Board decision and to enjoin the Office of Economic Stabilization from penalizing six stores by taking away wartime privileges.

The stores involved are in Denver, Jamaica, and Detroit, and employ 1500 workers. These stores do an annual business of 30 million dollars. The union involved is the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America, C. I. O.

Under WLB orders, the company is subject to clauses maintaining union membership, dues check-off, seniority, and grievance arbitration provisions. These, the suit maintains, are infringements of the constitutional rights of the company.

The suit maintains that the WLB, by entering the case and holding hearings, exceeded its legal rights in that the Montgomery Ward is not directly concerned with the war effort. Further, it is stated that legal procedures in regard to conduct of the hearings were disregarded, and the provisions of the War Labor Disputes Act violated in that two CIO officials, John Brophy and Van A. Bittner, were on the NWLB when the decision in the case was made.

The suit asks the court to prevent Economic Stabilization Director Vinson from carrying out any penalties he might contemplate should the company continue to disregard the WLB orders. These penalties, the suit states, are the withdrawal of the services of the United States Employment Service, transportation priveleges under the Office of Defense Transportation and the possible reclassification of draftable employes now classified as essential.

D. C. Gunner Held by Nazis As Prisoner

Staff Sergt. Harry G. Malas, 21, reported missing over Hamburg two months ago, is a German prisoner of war at Camp Stalag 7A, the War Department reported yesterday.

MALAS

Sergeant Malas, who lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Malas, at 7127 9th st. nw., was a waist gunner on a Flying Fortress.

He was drafted in August, 1942, and trained at Fort Myers, Fla.; Salt Lake City, Utah; Blythe, Calif.; Pyote, Tex.; Casper, Wyo., and Salina, Kans. After May, 1943, he was stationed somewhere in England.

"He never wrote home about his missions," his sister, Katherine Malas, said yesterday. "He just told us personal things—about visiting London, and things like that."

The family was notified of Sergeant Malas' imprisonment September 1 and have written him daily since. They have not as yet heard from him directly.

Before he was drafted, he was employed at the Connecticut ave. Kresge store, following a year's study at Benjamin Franklin University. At McKinley High, he was prominent in bowling, basketball, and baseball—activities which he continued in civic leagues after his graduation.

Besides Catherine, Sergeant Malas has two other sisters—Tessie and Olga, and a brother, James, still in school.

Episcopalians May Retain Tucker as Presiding Bishop of Church

Cleveland, Oct. 5 (AP).—Retention of the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker of Richmond, Va., as presiding Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States for another three years was anticipated by some church leaders tonight following action on retirement age limits.

Also mentioned at the church's 54th triennial convention as candidates for the highest office were Bishops Henry Knox Sherrill of Massachusetts, Robert E. Strider of West Virginia Frank W. Greighton of Michigan and W. Bertrand stevens of Los Angeles.

Bishop Tucker, 69, would retire next January 1 under existing canons. Today, however, the House of Bishops approved an amendment which would permit a presiding bishop to continue in office until the general convention following his 70th birthday anniversary. The proposed change needs concurrence of the House of Deputies to become effective.

The bishops' favorable vote of 58 to 19 on the amendment was viewed by some churchmen as an indication Bishop Tucker would be retained in the office to which he was named six years ago at Cincinnati.

Election of a new presiding bishop or retention of Bishop Tucker, requiring a majority vote by bishops and majority approval by deputies will be decided at later convention sessions.

Later in the day a controversy over proposed liberalization of church canons governing remarriage of divorced persons reached the floor of the convention, but debate was postponed until Thursday.

The Rev. Alexander B. Andrews of Raleigh, N. C., chairman of the committee on canons for the house of deputies, told delegates a majority and two minority reports had been prepared by his committee on the findings of a joint commission of deputies and bishops, and would be presented later.

Under present church laws, remarriage is condoned only for innocent persons in divorces based on adultery. The revised canon proposed by the joint commission liberalizes the rule, permitting remarriage of divorced persons at the discretion of the bishop, "with the advice and counsel" of a parish priest, an attorney and a psychiatrist.

The Right Rev. Cameron J. Davis, Bishop of Western New York, headed the joint commission, which included four bishops, four clergymen and four laymen.

Another proposed canon amendment approved by the bishops today would permit missionary districts to have bishop coadjutors with the right of succession, instead of bishop suffragans who do not have the right to succeed the bishop. This proposal also requires deputies' concurrence.

60 Granted Citizenship in District Court Ceremony

Milton W. King, president of the District Bar Association, delivered an address on "Americanism" to 60 persons naturalized yesterday in a ceremony in District Court before Justice David A. Pine.

King said, "America is one country where no distinction is made between those born as citizens and those made citizens by law. But it must be realized this citizenship is a rare privilege, Americanism itself is an ideal of beauty toward which we all must strive."

Another speech was delivered by Mrs. William E. Richardson of the Daughters of the American Revolution congratulating the new citizens.

Two sisters and a brother, all from Italy, were among those naturalized. They were Antonio Renzulli, 31; Miss Laura Renzulli, 35, and Miss Josephine Marie Renzulli, 33. All reside at 1232 Florida ave. ne.

Those naturalized were:

The Home Front Pledge

★ I Will Pay No More Than Top Legal Prices
★ I Will Accept No Rationed Goods Without Giving Up Ration Stamps

The women of America are enlisting—to preserve the home front. All over the country, patriotic housewives are making the Home Front Pledge—dedicating themselves to keep down the cost of living—to stamp out Black Markets in food and other necessities. They are determined to "hold the line".

Volunteer for the housewives army. Put the Home Front Pledge to work right now and keep it working.

Look for the top legal prices (ceiling prices) as posted in the stores where you shop, or marked on the price tags of the individual articles. Clip the top legal prices or ceiling prices when they are published in your paper, and use it for guidance when you shop, but remember that the same article does not have to be identically priced in every store. It is your responsibility to check the prices you pay against the top legal prices (ceiling prices). Call your retailer's attention to any errors, and if he is unwilling to correct them, report the violation to the Price Panel of your War Prices and Rationing Board, or to the Better Business Bureau, in writing. Your name will not be used without your permission.

Remember, you have a part in this War that is important—keeping prices down and preventing inflation. Do not shirk—do your share.
